GIRL CONFESSES ROMANCE WITH MURDER VICTIM

FAMILIES FLEE TWO BLAZES

Driven Out by Fires in Dorchester and Somerville Buildings

Two families were driven out by fire and smoke today from their dwelling at Nos. 27-29 Tucker street, Dorchester.

The fire started in the basement and worked up into the first floor. Edward Lawler on the second floor smelled smoke and assisted his family out. The Lawlers roused Mr. and Mrs. Saul Dutton on the lower floor, who took out their two children. Damage was $2,000.

In Somerville several families were alarmed by fire in a two and one-half-story wooden building at No. 224 Washington street, occupied on the first floor by the Cambridge Machine & Tool Company. The second floor is used as a furniture repair shop.

Firemen kept the flames in the building with $5,000 loss. The tenement dwellers were ready to get out, but did not have to leave their homes. Within 125 feet of the fire was an old wooden carbarn now used for storage.

KIDNAPERS FOILED BY RICH GIRL

"Pat" Bowen's Daughter Sought for Ransom by Richly Dressed Women

The nimble wit of pretty fifteen-year-old Eleanor Bowen of Dorchester frustrated a bold kidnaping plot.

She is the daughter of "Pat" Bowen, Boston politician, wealthy hotel and restaurant owner and former Boston alderman. Two suave feminine kidnapers plotted to make the girl captive and hold her for ransom, the police believe.

"Pat" Bowen

Eleanor received a telephone message inviting her to meet her "aunt" in a Boston jewelry shop. The call went to Notre Dame Academy, where Eleanor is a student, and the message was given to the girl.

She became suspicious and after some thought communicated with her mother, who is her confidante. If one of her aunts had arranged to meet her downtown and to accompany her to a dressmaker's shop, as the message declared, Eleanor wondered why her mother had not told her about it before she left for school.

POLICE NOTIFIED.

When Mrs. Bowen was told of the call, she telephoned her daughter's three aunts and learned that none of them had sent the message. She told Eleanor to come home immediately and communicated with Mr. Bowen. He went to the jewelry store where his daughter had been asked

WAITRESS WITH BEAN NIGHTLY

Elsie Stewart Tells of Dancing With Slain Guide While Wife Was in Hospital

By HAROLD R. HALL

Farmington, Me., March 1.—Miss Elsie Stewart, named by the State as one of the two "other women" in the murder trial of Mrs. Ethel H. Bean, testified today that she and Otis A. Bean, murdered Maine guide, had been in each other's company every night in the month of September last.

She admitted that they had been together until midnight practically every night of that month—the month before the guide was murdered.

She admitted that she had danced with the guide, and had gone to the Farmington Fair with him while his wife lay in a Portland hospital recovering from an operation.

When Miss Stewart took the stand a hush fell over the crowded courtroom. Day after day women and men have crowded the little courtroom waiting to see the "mystery woman."

Under direct examination Miss Stewart testified she danced with the guide at Rangeley on August 30 and she knew where Bean was every night for over a month except for three nights when she was away.

COURTROOM THRILLED.

Under cross-examination by Attorney Pattangall for the defense Miss Stewart thrilled the courtroom by her admissions.

Q.—You were at the Farmington Fair? A.—Yes.

Q.—Who went from the island. A.—The bunch. She explained that the bunch meant herself, Bean, Bert Kimball, Mrs. Toothaker and a man named Peterson.

Q.—Going down you rode in the back seat and Bean in the front seat? A.—Yes.

Q.—Coming back Bean took the back seat and Mrs. Toothaker the front with Mr. Kimball? A.—Yes.

Q.—At the Pleasant Island Camp where do the help live? A.—In one building.

Q.—You each had separate rooms?

MURRAY IS SPURNED BY WIFE

Declares, at Blue Sky Hearing, That He Fails to Support Her

A slip of a woman, with fire in her eyes and courage in her soul, whose husband ran off with "the other woman" ten years ago, leaving her to bring up three young children, walked off the witness stand in the Department of Public Utilities today and declared:

"He don't support me, only when I drive him into it. I don't want his support. Let him take care of the one he is living with now."

The woman was Mrs. Rose Anna Murray of Medford.

The man she denounced was Robert R. J. Murray, ex-polygamist, former railroad worker who flew into the realm of high finance by launching the $1,000,000 Interstate Drug Company, Inc., and who was on trial today for alleged violation of the Blue Sky Laws.

ADMITS POLYGAMY.

Mrs. Murra was called to the witness stand to verify the charges that Murray had left her penniless, had married another woman while he was still her husband and that he has twice been arrested for non-support.

Counsel for Murray agreed that the records of Murray's conviction for pilygamy were accurate, and Commissioner Leonard F. Hardy said it was hardly worth while, under the circumstances, to drag Mrs. Murray through a recital of her domestic troubles.

Murray quickly left his seat and took a place where he could look directly at his ex-wife and made an effort to attract her attention.

Mrs. Murray, without being forced to give a word of evidence, at once left the stand, without a look at him. When she reached the corridor, she declared:

"I was willing to testify. I was willing to have everyone know that he doesn't support me, only when I drive him into it. Let him take care of the woman he is living with now."

NEW CHARGES.

Murray was charged with "conducting the business in a fraudu-

BANK CRASH PROBE BY U. S. JURY

Indictments of Marcino, Taylor and Goldman Sought in Warren Case

The Federal Grand Jury today began its probe into the looting of the First National Bank of Warren.

Although a strict censorship has been maintained as to the details, it is thought that indictments will be sought against Joseph B. Marcino, the banker-banker believed to have been the brains of the job; his alleged son, Frank L. Taylor, the $50 a week president of the bank who is a prisoner in Chicago and has waived extradition and confessed his guilt, Ingenesio Marcino, who is said to have financed his pictures, and son-in-law.

O. Otis Bean

Proceedings were delayed through the tardiness of National Bank Examiner Norwin S. Bean, who has been acting as temporary receiver of the Warren Bank. It was learned that Bean had gone to Buffalo yesterday to look into the affairs of the Niagara Life Insurance Company, another Marcino venture which came to grief, and had been delayed in his return to Boston.

About ten witnesses from Worcester and Warren were on hand to testify. They included Raymond B. Fletcher, United States commissioner in Worcester and one of the officers of the bank; his son, Frank L. Fletcher, and Howard W. Cowee.

All three are members of the law firm of Cowee & Fletcher, which effected the reorganization of the bank wherein Marcino got hold and placed Taylor in as president.

Hollis L. Riddle, Boston broker of No. 59 Congress street, was among the witnesses, as were Zenas Crocker, Jr., and Fred Annis, brokers in bank securities. Riddle is the man who started suit against the law firm of Cowee & Fletcher, and against Taylor, for alleged

"Big Frank Moore," Philadelphia Bandit, Was Peter Pelonquin of Worcester

Philadelphia, March 1.—The veil over the mysterious past of "Big Frank" Moore, bandit and gunman, shot to death by police Monday, was lifted today.

Police detectives got the story first hand from a trembling old man, with a shock of white hair, gold rimmed spectacles, a beaver cap, and a blue flannel shirt, who called at the City Hall.

He looked at a picture of the desperado and escaped convict.

"Why, yes," said the old man, "that's my son, that's my boy."

"Big Frank's" real name was Peter Pelonquin, according to his father, who came here from Worcester, Mass. The father's name is John.

Referring to what he called the dominating influence of the United States, with its vastly greater population, wealth and trade, he said:

lent manner and purposely seeking to nullify the law."

Two additional charges were launched against him today with the result that Attorney Shanley asked the case be continued. He said the charges were new to him.

Arthur W. Dow, head of the stock brokerage firm of A. F. Dow & Co., No. 40 State street, charged that Murray stated to the department that he was to become a salesman, "going to work through me as a broker," and that such a statement "is untrue."

Lieutenant Michael T. Kennedy of the Somerville police brought the second new charge—that Murray was arrested three weeks ago for alleged failure to provide for the support of his three minor children by his first wife.

SERVED ELEVEN MONTHS.

It was stated that Murray, while married to Rose Anna Murray, was married in Nashua, N. H., in 1910, to Emma E. Chase of Medford. He was arrested on a non-support charge and given two years. He served seven months pending trial and four more after conviction.

Lieutenant Kennedy testified that about three months ago he arrested Murray for neglect of his three children. While under arrest Murray was taken to the Probate Court, where he was charged with failure to carry out a court order requiring him to pay a stipulated sum weekly for the support of his family. The neglect charge is still pending in Somerville, Kennedy said.

Few men in public life enjoyed a wider acquaintance or a greater host of friends than did the picturesque New Yorker. Not alone in New York and Washington, where he spent the greater part of his life, but in many States he was noted for the brilliance of his oratory and the vigor of his views on public questions.

A native of Ireland, born in County Sligo, he came to the United States in 1871 fresh from the best schools of his native land and of France. He was then seventeen. For five years he taught school and was admitted to the bar and began practicing law in New York. Six years later he was a delegate to the Democratic State Convention and from that point on he was conspicuous figure at political conventions.

GRANDMA SAVES CHILD; IS THEN OVERCOME

After rescuing her five-year-old granddaughter, Catherine O'Neill, of No. 113 Adams street, Malden, who was visiting her, Mrs. Catherine O'Connor returned to her flat on the third floor of a burning building at 392 Highland avenue, Malden, today and was overcom by smoke.

Firemen carried out Mrs. Mary Hart, an eighty-two-year-old woman, on the second floor. The daughter of Mrs. Hart, Mrs. John J. Moran, her husband, their six children, were able to escape unassisted. William Young, a roomer, was burned about the face and hands as he made his escape. Several others in the building fled to the street, scantily clad.

The fire was caused by a chimney which failed to function properly.

In addition to the fire damage, estimated at over $1,000, stores on the street floor of the building were damaged by water.

BANDIT MOORE BAY STATE BOY

with police in West Philadelphia house.

He registered surprise, awe, and amazement as he heard how "Big Frank" had been sentenced in Allentown for robbery of a bank and theft of automobiles; how he escaped; how he was identified as one of the bandits who staged a daring $4000 gem robbery here last week; how he lived in luxury in the West Philadelphia residence until police men battered their way through the doors; how "Big Frank," the crack pistol shot of the underworld, died "with his boots on."

"Why, the last time I saw my boy was seven years ago, when he stopped off to see Mom and me at Worcester," said the father. "He told us he was a traveling salesman."

Polonquin, seventy-four, was formerly an engineman on the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad. He learned, he said, of Peter's death from his wife Dorothy, who lives at No. 542 North Lawler street, Chicago.

"She called us over the telephone," said the old man. "I couldn't hear very well, so my wife talked for me. Then I started right over here with my boy Edward. She didn't tell us how he died.

"Why," the father said, "I had no idea, no idea."

The father was told underworld friends had provided a fund to keep "Big Frank's" body out of the Potter's Field.

"Well, that's mighty kind, but I guess I can take care of it myself," the old man said.

"We gave him a good education in the public schools," Polonquin said. "He got a good bringing up at home."

"Big Frank's" wife Dorothy wrote that her husband had deserted her, and sent two of their four children to Worcester to be cared for, the father said. In the letter she did not reveal, if she knew, that her husband had been in prison.

THE REGULAR four-yearly fight for the Presidency and control of the government is under way. Two Democrats are out in the open for nomination. Each, of course, thinks he has it safe.

PRESIDENT HARDING'S friends have begun the work of renominating him. That won't be difficult. Possession of the organization makes it practically impossible to nominate anybody else. The President is expected to go on a speech-making trip next Summer. It won't be necessary.

WHERE ARE the big men of the United States? You ask that, when the time comes to choose another President. Among one hundred and ten millions of us, where are the great men that all the millions know, admire and trust? We put a man in office and decide he must be "a great man" because he was elected. But, where is the real greatness?

What has any man in public life in the United States done that makes him stand out above others? What greatness is there except artificial reputations made by newspapers and constant repetition of a name?

What, in your opinion, is the meaning of the fact that the greatest nation in the world, in wealth and power at least, produces so large a crop of small men?

Perhaps it is better and safer for a democracy not to have big men, and to put little men doing its work. But that doesn't answer the question. Where are the biggest men of the biggest nation, and who are they?

THE ANSWER is found partly in a statement by General Biles, "The business men of the world can stop wars if they want to. It is up to them."

The work of the world just now is business industry, building factories, employing men, making money. And in the process of making money business men have often made wars.

They needed markets, or wanted to check business competition in another nation. Now they have found out that war is a bad thing for business. Perhaps they will bring peace.

MR DITMARS, head of the great Zoological Garden in New York, says a normal human baby is not afraid of any animal except a cat.

It will gaze at a lion, even at a great snake, without fear. But a cat frightens it, and kittens terrify it.

That fear goes back a long way. Women naturally fear snakes, because when they lived in trees the snakes climbed the trees, wriggled out along the limbs and picked off the baby.

THE BABY perhaps fears cats because leopards and other small cat-like animals represented danger to children in the early days.

Today cats and kittens cause the death of thousands of children, bringing to them the germs of scarlet fever, diphtheria and other diseases. If there were no cats in the world there would be fewer baby funerals. A mother that allows a young child to play with a cat is inviting sickness and death.

THE ALLEGED early human skull of the tertiary period, said to be found in South America may help settle our ancestry. Some scientists say that a human skull of that period is not a probability.

But Charles Harvey Feck, in his interesting book, "Our World," predicts that the original early man, if found, will be located in the early tertiary period.

IT SHOULD be clearly understood, for the belief of William Jennings Bryan, and others, no scientist has ever suggested that men descended from the monkey. So they have observed the interesting resemblance between the skeletons of apes and men. But they have not thought that apes were our ancestors. If this Argentine skull is genuine it goes back to a date that almost makes you shudder, a date when,

This child's brother, aged eighteen, had conceived a violent hatred against another of his brothers. Every time that he had taken a little too much wine, he felt impelled to draw a knife and stab his brother. He felt that one day or other he would end by doing so, and he knew at the same time that having done so he would be inconsolable. I treated him also by suggestion, and the result was marvelous. After the first treatment he was cured. His hatred for his brother had disappeared, and they have since become good friends and got on capitally together. I followed up the case for a long time, and the cure was permanent.

Since such results are to be obtained by suggestion, would it not be beneficial—I might say indispensable—to take up this method and introduce it into our reformatories? I am absolutely convinced that if suggestion were daily applied to vicious children, more than 50 per cent. could be reclaimed. Would it not be an immense service to render society, to bring back to it sane and well members of it who were formerly corroded by moral decay?

Perhaps I shall be told that suggestion is a dangerous thing, and that it can be used for evil purposes. This is no valid objection, first, because the practice of suggestion would only be confided to reliable and honest people—to the reformatory doctors, for instance—and on the other hand, those who seek to use it for evil ask no one's permission.

But even admitting that it offers some danger (which is not so), I should like to ask whoever proffers the objection, to tell me what thing we use that is not dangerous? Is it steam? gunpowder? railways? ships? electricity? automobiles? aeroplanes? Are the poisons not dangerous which we, doctors and chemists, use daily in minute doses, and which might easily destroy the patient if, in a moment's carelessness, we unfortunately made a mistake in weighing them out?

LEVIATHAN GOING AT BARGAIN

U. S. Shipping Board Plans to Dispose of the Great War Fleet Before June 1

International News Service.

Washington, March 1.—The U. S. Emergency Fleet, which cost the government more than three billion dollars, will be in the hands of private ship owners by June 1, officials of the Shipping Board said today.

In the liquidation project 1,380 passenger and cargo vessels, shipyards at Hog Island and Alameda, Cal., railways and drydocks will be placed on the market.

LEVIATHAN ON SALE.

Vessels to be disposed of cost over a billion and a half dollars. Of the original fleet of 2,312 steamers 932 have already been sold by the government.

The giant Leviathan, acquired from Germany after the armistice, is among the thirty liners the Shipping Board will put up for sale. The former Vaterland, rebuilt by the government at a cost of $8,500,000, is to be formally inspected at Newport News, Va., tomorrow, and in June is expected to make her maiden voyage.

Assets of the fleet corporation other than ships, cost $500,000,000. Officials of the Shipping Board estimated over three-quarters of this class of property has been sold.

Property representing an investment of close to two billion dollars remains for disposal. Officials refused to guess at what the government will get for the marine holdings. It is not likely, however, the figure will approach half the cost.

LOSING $50,000,000 YEARLY.

The plans of Chairman A. D. Lasker to place the merchant marine on the market are being guarded closely. The method will be "surprising and novel" and one which will give the government maximum returns for its investment, officials said. That the sale or lease contracts will stipulate certain of the vessels be maintained in the trades which they are now operating or in other trades fixed by the government, was the understanding.

Only 332 steamers, passenger and cargo, are now operated by the government because of unfavorable shipping conditions.

The government is now losing $50,000,000 annually on the fleet.

REPUDIATE ALL DEBTS OF CZAR

Trotzky, in Reply to Lodge, Declares Soviets Will Never Pay Them

By ANNA LOUISE STRONG.

Copyright, 1923, by International News Service.

Moscow, March 1.—Leon Trotzky, People's Commissar for War in the Soviet government, told International News Service today that the Bolshevist government was determined not to pay the debts contracted by Russia during the old Czarist regime.

Trotzky's declaration was called forth by a cable dispatch quoting Senator Henry Cabot Lodge as saying that recognition of the Moscow government was hindered by its dishonest attitude toward financial obligations. Trotzky declared if Senator Lodge were truthfully quoted in saying that Russia did not feel bound by any treaties he was guilty of a "daring and insolent statement."

MORALS NOT THE SAME.

"I don't desire to approach Senator Lodge's statement from a moral point of view," said Trotzky. "Undoubtedly we stand on different moral grounds. It would be important, we feel, if Senator Lodge would cite instances where the Soviet government has violated treaties.

"Perhaps he has in mind the obligations concluded while the old Czarist regime was in power. We never gave anyone occasion to think that after the successful revolution we would take up the whole Czarist inheritance. We cannot allow Senator Lodge to confuse our obligations with those of our most deadly enemies.

WARNED CREDITORS.

"We warned our creditors with repeated pronouncements that we did not intend to pay the debts contracted by the government of the Czar. We will not pay them. Long before the successful revolution we made that statement. It is possible that the Czarists did not attach much importance to them. But allow me to point out that we made this warning years ago.

"We emphasized this warning after Russia, through use of French gold, crushed the revolution which was directed against Romanoff domination. This reveals how short-sighted were the creditors who lent money to the Czarist government. We, of course, are not responsible for this oversight."

SOCIETY LEADER IS TOBOGGAN VICTIM

While attending the Winter sports of the Salem Chamber of Commerce at North Conway, N. H., Mrs. Lombard sprained a ligament of the right knee when the toboggan on which she was coasting with several others left the slide and capsized.

MRS. BETTY LOMBARD

SHE SOBS STORY OF HER LOVE

Woman Slayer, Half-Fainting, Near Collapse in 4-Hour Ordeal on Stand

New York, March 1.—Oscar M. Martelliere was a marked man. Perhaps he knew that, and to cheat the two women who composed a possible death squad, placed in his desk the revolver with which one of them eventually dealt him death.

Either of the two women would, with bullets, put a final exclamation point to the haphazard business career based on his adroit, albeit temporary, deception of his instruments, women.

Whether that was in his mind will never be known. But it is on the record of the General Sessions Court.

MISS SALUDES TELLS.

It was placed on that record in the sobbing syllables of Mrs. Paulette Saludes, one of the women he had wronged, now on trial for shooting him to death on October 16 last, in his insurance office at No. 100 William street.

Mrs. Saludes fired the shots that, but for self-restraint, her victim's wife, Mrs. Johanna Martelliere, might have spat into his frame, according to the testimony of Mrs. Saludes.

She began by giving her age, thirty, and address, No. 33 West Ninety-sixth street.

She told of Martelliere bidding her husband, James Saludes, God-speed, when Saludes, head of the Saludes Lumber Company, sailed for France on January 21, 1921, on business. Since, he has been in Africa.

The witness said Martelliere visited her a few days after her husband's departure and said Saludes did not intend to return, that he was a thief and had absconded with money of the company.

She told of Martelliere's frequent visits, how he finally won her love, how they lived together as man and wife, and how she transferred her property to him.

She said that her meeting with Mrs. Martelliere followed a request she had written to the wife of the broker. She declared that a short time before she realized that Martelliere's love for her was waning.

"I sent Mrs. Martelliere a letter and asked her to meet me on October 14 at Gimbels.

TOLD OF THEIR INTIMACY.

"I asked her if she knew the situation between her husband and me, that we had been living together. She said she didn't know it. And then I told her the whole story of our intimacy.

"I asked her if she would consent to giving him a divorce," she went on. "She said that she would.

"She said that she hoped Martelliere would meet with an accident, and she would have only to bury him," the witness continued. "She repeated, and she said many times, that she wanted to kill him."

Mrs. Saludes said she had not seen Martelliere for eight days when she telephoned to him on October 16, the day of the killing. She said she had been intimate with Martelliere from February, 1921.

"I told him over the telephone that everything would be all right—that we would be married soon," she said. "He said, 'Well, I won't do it,' and he hung up the receiver.

"I was working in West Ninetieth street," Mrs. Saludes explained to the jury, "and I went to his office right away. I told him that I had come for an explanation. He said, 'This is no place for that.'

"I asked him if he was going to leave me like a dog in this way, and he said that he didn't mind about me." She said Martelliere then went out, slamming the door.

"I found the revolver in his drawer and I had only the idea to kill myself. I didn't want to live any more."

"I don't know what happened after that," she told the jury. "I know I wanted to die. Then I remember looking into Martelliere's face." At this point the witness began to sob.

The lawyer asked her if she remembered having stood over Martelliere and fired three shots at him while he was on the floor, as Miss Gertrude Thompson, the seventeen-year-old stenographer in the office, had testified on the preceding day, and she replied that she did not.

LYNN WOMAN INJURED AT CARNIVAL

Mrs. Betty Lombard, prominent Lynn society woman, has arrived at her apartments at "The Breakers," on Lynn Shore Drive today, after being painfully injured while sliding on a toboggan during the recent Winter carnival at North Conway, N. H.

Mrs. Lombard, with her sister, Mrs. Stella Lyon, also of Lynn, were members of the Salem Chamber of Commerce party that went to New Hampshire for the sports.

Mrs. Lombard was on the toboggan with twelve other young women when it left the slide and capsized.

All the coasters escaped injury with the exception of Mrs. Lombard, who received a sprained ligament of the right knee. She was picked up and taken to the Hotel Rundall where her injuries were treated by a physician. Later she was brought to Lynn.

50 CAUGHT BY FREE STATE AT BALINA

Dublin, March 1 (By International News Service).—Fifty Republicans were captured by Free State troops today at Balina.

A violent battle, in which there is believed to have been many casualties, was reported from Clonmel.

Among the Republican prisoners taken in the past few days were many important leaders. Several were drowned while trying to escape by swimming rivers.

PARIS PARADE OF "QUEENS" ABOLISHED

Paris, March 1 (By the Associated Press). — Woman's willfulness is blamed for the disappearance of another festival dear to Parisian hearts. Mi-Careme, or Mid Lent, this year will not see the parade of floats with the twenty queens and the queen of queens who formerly went in state to the Elysee palace, dressed in elaborate costumes, to be kissed by the president.

The queens were feted for weeks afterward and the prettiest were usually offered theatre or moving picture engagements.

Madamoiselle Buckat, last year's queen of queens, played the royal role so well that she refused to obey the festival committee, so this year the committee has abolished the traditional ceremonies and has decided to have each of the twenty wards in Paris elect a "bee." The entire city will have a "queen bee," who will be chosen on merit rather than for her beauty. The "bees" will wear their own gowns instead of being supplied with "royal robes," and the usual festivities will be eliminated except for the visit to President Millerand.

SAYS GERMANS MAY PAY U. S. WITH DYES

Paris, March 1 (By International News Service).—The United States may accept dyes and chemicals from Germany for the $255,000,000 owing for the upkeep of the American army of occupation on the Rhine, it was reported here today when the International Conference opened regarding costs of the armies of occupation.

America is represented in the conference by Eliot Wadsworth, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury.

"The problem of adjusting the costs of the armies of occupation of the allied and associated powers is made more difficult by the fact that Germany has ceased all payments," said the Matin. "It seems, however, that Washington must realize this.

"The American Treasury Department probably would be content if awarded certain payments in kind, notably dyes or chemicals.

WOMAN LEGISLATOR WINS MAINE FIGHT

Augusta, Me., March 1.—The House voted victory to Mrs. Dorothy Bradbury Pinkham, Maine's only woman legislator, in her first legislative fight on the floor. By a vote of 71 to 63, her resolution to have the State accept provisions of the Sheppard-Towner Maternity Act was accepted. Her speech in favor of the resolution was her maiden effort. She quoted briefly from vital statistics of the State.

MRS. HUCK DEFEATED BY FRAUD, SHE SAYS

Washington, March 1.—Mrs. Winifred Masson Huck, congresswoman from Illinois and daughter of former United States Senator "Billy" Mason, has announced her intention of demanding a congressional investigation of the Republican primaries in her district, where she was defeated for renomination by Morton D. Hull.

"I am convinced Hull spent large sums of money to defeat me for the nomination," Mrs. Huck said, "and I do not believe I was defeated by 5,000 votes, as the returns indicate. I want the matter probed to the bottom."

The returns indicate that Mrs. Huck was second in a field of six candidates in the Republican primaries in her district, receiving 13,744 votes.

British Press Jubilant Over Ship Subsidy Defeat

London, March 1.—The Chronicle, commenting on the death of the ship subsidy bill in the United States Senate, raises a whoop under the headline:

"America's dreams of ocean supremacy shattered by Britain."

Editorially this newspaper says: "The dream was shattered finally by the American taxpayer, but its true causes of failure were economic. America could not build ships as cheaply as we do or as well."

Other editorial writers find that the moral in the United States' experiment is the futility of any government's attempting to create an industry artificially or to nationalize an industry."

Mrs. Shea Changes Name Because of Her Religion

Mrs. Gertrude L. Shea of Sharon has had her name changed back to her maiden one of Thomas, to avoid "explanation," as she says.

Miss Thomas, as she is now, had divorced her husband, but kept her married name. In her petition for change of name, which has been granted by Probate Judge McCoole at Dedham, she said:

"I am a Protestant and, as I am working and making my living thereby, the name of Shea always needs explanation, and Thomas is my maiden name."

She is fifty-two years old and works as a caretaker.

EX-SENATOR JOYCE OF ROXBURY DEAD

Representative Thomas Martin Joyce, former State Senator and long active in Roxbury politics, died at his home, No. 423 Dudley street. The funeral will be held Saturday from St. Patrick's Church.

"Tom" Joyce was one of the most interesting characters in Boston politics. He took up the cudgel against Mayor Curley in the Mayor's first administration and ran for representative in Ward 17, Curley's old ward, on a strict anti-Curley ticket. He was successful, defeating "Teddy" Glynn, one of the Mayor's lieutenants.

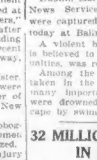
CHINESE FACTIONS RENEW CIVIL WAR

London, March 1.—(By International News Service)—Civil war has broken out anew in China, according to advices received by the Foreign Office today from Hong Kong. It is believed the fighting is near Canton, between the followers of Dr. Sun Yat Sen and the troops supporting the Peking government.

32 MILLIONS REMAIN IN FRICK ESTATE

Pittsburgh, March 1.—The second accounting filed by the executors of the estate of Henry Clay Frick, financier and philanthropist, shows that more than $16,000,000 has been paid to his widow, Adelaide H. C. Frick; his son, Childs Frick, and other legatees, while $32,124,447.16 remains to be distributed.



Helen Clay Frick

Since the first accounting the estate has enhanced over $6,000,000. The income since the trustees took charge totaled $3,025,742.65. No distribution has been made yet to the different universities, hospitals and charitable institutions provided for in the will.

GRANT SEES NO NEED OF LEAVING CHURCH

New York, March 1.—"If a man does not believe in a certain point in the church there is no need for him to leave the church."

"The apostles' creed was not written by the apostles." "None of us come from Adam and Eve." These were the declarations of the Rev. Dr. Stickney Grant, speaking at the Church of the Ascension.

Dr. Grant.

Dr. Grant declared that the mythology of Greece and Rome sneaked in through the back door of Christianity. The pagan world, he said, was full of imagination.

HARVEY TO PLEAD GUILTY OF MURDER

Two murder trials which were to have been held at Dedham next Monday have been postponed, according to Sheriff Samuel H. Capen today.

Albert L. Harvey of Quincy, charged with the murder of Mrs. Ida G. Anderer at Hough's Neck, November 24, will plead guilty of murder in the second degree, according to Sheriff Capen, which will make it unnecessary to draw a jury.

William Morgan, negro janitor who killed Dr. H. Z. Reynolds with a shotgun last September, is still under observation by alienists, who are not ready to report upon his sanity.

COURT TO INTERVIEW MAURICE IN DIVORCE

London, March 1.—The remarkable Furness suits—by the wife for the restitution of conjugal rights and relations, and by the husband for divorce—were adjourned on application of counsel for Mrs. Furness. A commission will be sent to take the testimony of Maurice, the dancer who is ill with consumption in Switzerland. Maurice is named by Furness as corespondent in the divorce action.

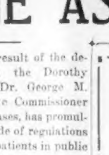
MUSTEROLE
"MUSTARD BLISTER"

As a direct result of the developments in the Dorothy Gordon case, Dr. George M. Kline, the State Commissioner of Mental Diseases, has promulgated a new code of regulations for voluntary patients in public and private asylums.

The regulations are to prevent a repetition of the illegal commitment of Dorothy Gordon and to protect all present and future inmates from relatives and guardians who would "railroad" them into insane asylums to gain control over money and property.



Dr. G. M. Kline

There are 15,000 patients in the public and about 4,000 inmates of the private asylums. One of the first effects of the new regulations will be an immediate examination of all of them who are enrolled as voluntary patients.

The principal features of the new regulations are these:

No minor shall in the future be received in any asylum as a voluntary patient. Dorothy Gordon was a minor.

No person shall be admitted as a voluntary patient who can be regularly committed by the courts as an insane patient.

No person shall be admitted as a voluntary patient unless he is fully competent to understand the conditions of his admission and unless he is fully aware that he is entitled to be released immediately on his request.

Every person who is admitted as a voluntary patient must first have signed his own petition for admission.

If he at any time signifies to a medical officer of a hospital that he is desirous of leaving, the officer must at once supply him with a written application for his release.

MUST ACT PROMPTLY.

The regulations further declare that if the voluntary patient goes through a change of mental condition which may render him incompetent to understand his status as a voluntary patient, or if his mental change makes it necessary to commit him to forcible restraint, the hospital officials must at once take the necessary legal steps to secure his commitment by the courts, or must effect his release.

Dorothy Gordon's condition changed so that it became necessary to subject her to the custodia.

"It is contrary to the intent of the voluntary statute that persons admitted under its provisions should remain permanent residents of institutions in that standing," Dr. Kline stated.

ADVISES EXAMINATIONS.

"It is therefore advised that the several superintendents carefully review their voluntary cases and either discharge or have committed those of long standing.

"And in general it is deemed inadvisable to continue a patient in voluntary status beyond the period of twelve months, nor should a voluntary patient be carried as a visitor for longer than 48 hours."

Dr. Kline said he estimated there are about 150 voluntary patients now confined in the institutions.

His regulations will be presented to the Legal Affairs Committee of the Legislature where the Rev. Roland D. Sawyer, who exposed Dorothy Gordon's illegal commitment, has a bill which would compel all hospitals to examine and report the conditions of voluntary patients within 48 hours of their confinement to the State Department of Mental Diseases.

Regardless of what the Legislature may do with the Sawyer bill the new regulations are now in effect.

STORIES OF BOSTON TOWN

By Jo Swerling

A LETTER TO MORRIS GEST.

Mr. Morris Gest, Princess Theatre Building, New York City, N. Y.

Dear Morris—Please forgive me for letting a few hundred thousand people look over my shoulder as I write to tell you about the Princess Irena Chagadaleff-Sakansky of Petrograd, Moscow and Haverhill.

The name may not be familiar to you, but your conferencier Nikita Balieff may recall it. If he doesn't, ask Ivan Malkvin, Boris Demtchenko, Lydia Kosteneva, Vassily Katchaloff, Vladimir Gribunin, Constantin Stanislavsky, Olga Knipper-Tchekhova or any of the other caviar in your Russian troupe that's clicking off $45,000 a week at Jolson's Theatre.

If they can't remember the Princess Irena it's because she was only seven years old when Ivan the Peasant gave the ruin to Nikolas Romanovr and his government. Irena's mother, the Princess Zenaida Chagadaleff-Sakansky, was for fifteen years a lady-in-waiting to Her Majesty the Empress of Russia. Irena's father, a member of the royal household, was a Russian senator, and his blood flowed into the rivulets which reddened the streets of Petrograd during the historic spree of Ivan.

Prince Killed, His Son Slain

They lived in a big palace at Tsekent in Southern Russia and had a town residence in the Prospekt Choskaja in Petrograd. The Reds burned the palace and the town house, killed the prince, slew his son and made prisoners of Irena and Zenaida.

It was a ghastly, bloody, horrible spectacle, but Irena, sorrowing as she was over the calamities that had befallen her family, could still look on, thrilled, because the revolution to her was a huge motion picture show, and Irena's life ambition was the Kino. That's what they call the movies in Russia.

During the years that Zenaida was lady-in-waiting to the Queen, Irena had a chance to meet and play with the children of the Grand Duke Nicholas, the Grand Duke Peter, Prince Roman and all the other titled persons of the court. But she found court life drab and boresome. She sought life in the Kinos.

She adored Lissenko, the marvelous Russian cinema actress, who is Mary Pickford, Olga Petrova, Niti Naldi and Pola Negri all in one, and when she was twelve years of age she determined that some day she would be a motion picture actress.

What a background she had! With her mother she went through the terrible period of war, of peace, of revolution, of reconstruction. Once, after months of suffering, there was a chance to escape. But Irena heard that the Soviet government had started a Kino Institute in Petrograd. She took the examination, passed with high honors despite her tender years, and became a member of the class.

The bearded professor who taught her the rudiments of the cinematographic art reminded her somewhat of the drunken mujik who killed her brother when he was trapped by a mob in the Newsky Prospekt. She found it easy to obey instructions when he told her to register sorrow. And happily she brushed away the tears when he wanted her to register joy. She knew that some day her likeness would flicker on a silver sheet.

Has the Magic Carpet Vanished?

Everywhere the word went about that America was the golden land for motion pictures. Irena told her mother that they must go to America. Her mother laughed. She reminded her daughter that the day of the magic carpet had gone. Irena registered determination.

Irena and her mother got to America. How they did it is another story that needs a volume to tell—and Irena is writing that story. Irena strayed to Haverhill. Haverhill, Morris, is a city in Massachusetts. She came with dozens of gorgeous dresses that she couldn't wear because they were not in style, but no money. She could speak French, Russian, German, Polish and Italian, but no English. She was taught in her early days how to hold her chin up like a princess, how to walk like a princess, how to act like a princess. But that didn't get her anything in the public school she attended in Haverhill.

The Princess Zenaida swallowed her pride and became a music teacher. She got five pupils. Their fees bought coffee and cakes for the two Russian refugees. The while Irena industriously scribbled "This is a cat" in her notebook and laboriously began to master the intricacies of our language. And today she can say "Thank you" in the most appealing way.

In between her compositions about cats, Irena drains the meagre income of her titled mother inordinately, begging quarters to go to the movies.

Please be patient, Morris. I'm coming down to the story pretty soon. I wanted you to have a sketchy idea of who Irena is and what she went through.

Today a settlement friend of the Chagadaleff-Sakanskys paid a visit to their home in Haverhill and told them glad news. A friend of a friend of hers knew a man who knew somebody who knew a man who was going to direct a new picture. It was to be a picture of Russia in revolutionary days. There was a part in the picture—a little girl of the Russian nobility. She was sure Irena could get the engagement, for her lack of knowledge of the English language would not be a bar in the movies. She took Irena over to see the director.

They Wanted a Russian Girl

The director looked Irena over. He saw a beautiful child, with lustrous black curls, mystic black eyes, sensitive mobile lips and a firm little chin. The director shook his head. "What we want is a Russian girl. She's not the type."

Irena couldn't quite make out what he had said, but she got the gist of it. She said "Thank you" in her appealing way, and went back to Haverhill with Princess Zenaida.

Morris, you were a newsboy in Boston once. I was a newsboy in New York. As one newsboy to another, I ask you: Are you going to stand for anything like that?

Look me up when you come to Boston the next time, and I'll introduce you to Her Highness, Princess Irena Chagadaleff-Sakansky of Petrograd, Moscow and Haverhill, who is waiting ever so patiently to step into the shoes of Mary Pickford.

LOVE THAT WAS 'WONDERFUL' VANISHES

Providence, March 1.—Brown University's "most wonderful romance" has hit the rocks.

May Winsor Hall, beauty of the class of Brown, '09, and John W. "Jesse" James, '08, were wed soon after she was graduated with honors from the university.

Vivacious May is now back at Brown. A professorship is her aim. At North Dighton, Mass., in care of her brother, are two children of the union. But "Jesse" James, the pugnacious withal popular "redhead" of Brown's stalwart sons of '08 is in Detroit.

In that city, a divorce proceeding, filed against him by his wife, is pending. Farm toil for his wife while the husband made gay in the city, is given by Mrs. James as the cause of the rift and the break.

"I pitched forty tons of hay in the last three years," she said, "but what of that? I still love the things I first loved in my husband when we were happy, but he is impossible to live with."

She charges that she was forced to do all the chores and work on a farm, to which they moved when her husband gave up ministerial pursuits for the motor car business in a small town in Michigan.

Advertising Men Startled by Gains of Hearst Papers

Washington, March 1.—The tremendous growth of the newspapers of today, especially the Hearst papers in New York and Chicago, is creating a new and serious problem in the advertising field, declared Henry G. Moehlman, classified advertising manager of the Baltimore Sun, in an address before the Advertising Club of Washington at its weekly luncheon.

Moehlman especially cited the tremendous growth of the Hearst paper in Chicago, which, he said, "now has a circulation of more than 1,000,000 on Sundays, having gained 350,000 in four or five months."

LAWYERS ON TAP FOR BOOTLEGS

Baltimore, March 1.—Bootleggers in this city are flourishing to such an extent that they have formed an association to provide lawyers for those who get caught. This was announced today by Gerald H. Parker, general prohibition agent.

A saloon keeper, arrested for violation of the Volstead Act, said the "Protective Association" charged $10 annual dues.

"It cost me $10 to join," he said, "but I won't have to pay a lawyer's fee now."

CHEAP AUTO AS 'LUXURY' FOR RICH WIDOW

New York, March 1.—One of the luxuries enjoyed in 1922 by Mrs. Jennie Woolworth, incompetent widow of Frank W. Woolworth, out of a gross income from her estate of $704,817, was a cheap automobile, purchased for her by her daughters for $299.

This was part of the information contained in the 1923 accounting filed in the county clerk's office by Hubert T. Parson, Mrs. Helena W. McCann and Mrs. Jessie W. Woolworth, committee of her estate.

The report states that the committee received for Mrs. Woolworth, as residuary legatee in the partial distribution of her husband's estate on December 23, 1922, 56,305 shares of preferred stock of the Broadway Park Place Company, value. $30,500; 59,995 shares of the co. stock of the same corporation $60,000, and sinking fund gold b... of the company, $22,492,344.

Out of the income of $704,817 in 1922, $72,281 was paid to Mrs. McCann and Mrs. Donahue for their mother's care and maintenance. The Federal income tax for 1922 was $238,808, and the State tax $13,789.

according to Mr. Peck, the Rocky Mountains had not yet been pushed up into the air by the power of earth forces.

WHAT WILL annoy Mr. Bryan more than the mistaken ape ancestry is the fact that the human race descends, as do the birds, from a branch of the reptile tribe. This can be easily demonstrated and seems simple to anybody willing to see and hear.

THE FRENCH persist in their effort to collect by force what they think is due them, and the British continue to worry about the situation. Their worry is genuine. They see their markets on the Continent being literally "shot to pieces."

There isn't any comfort in that situation.

FINDS BOYS IN HGH SCHOOLS BRIGHTER THAN THE GIRL PUPILS

HALF ARE UNFIT TO GO HIGHER

40 Per Cent. of Boys and 60 Per Cent. of Girls Low Grade, Report Says

Forty per cent. of the boys in the upper classes of the high schools of Massachusetts and 60 per cent. of the girls are unpromising material for higher education, according to a report mitted to Governor Cox by special commission on high- cation that has been conducting an investigation.

The commission reported that while a lower average of intelligence existed among girls, this was offset in a large degree by the fact that girls show more seriousness than boys in their studies, and more willingness to apply themselves to disagreeable tasks.

The commission bases its estimate upon the examination of 3,333 representatives of the senior classes of typical high schools.

Intelligence tests were applied, the tests used being those applied to freshmen at Brown University, to students picked at random and the commission holds that the survey made by it represents a "cross-section" of all the high schools in the Commonwealth.

The commission employed intelligence tests, as distinguished from examinations, in its survey of the schools, as being more likely to prove the existence or non-existence of capacity for higher education in the boys and girls who submitted to the tests.

President Lemuel H. Murlin of Boston University is chairman of the commission and the other members are Rev. William Devlin, S. J., president of Boston College, Mrs. George M. Baker, Felix Vorenberg, Jeremiah F. Driscoll, Carlton D. Richardson and Hector L. Belisle.

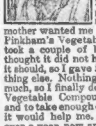
FRIENDS NOTICED IMPROVEMENT

Wonderful Results from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound



Bethel, Wis.—My female trouble was brought on by overwork. I had worked in stores and had to do heavier work than my strength could stand, and had to be on my feet most of the time. Finally I had to give up this work entirely and stay at home. Doctor's medicine did not give me much relief, and my mother wanted me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took a couple of bottles of it and thought it did not help me as much as it should, so I gave it up to try something else. Nothing I took helped me much, so I finally decided to give the Vegetable Compound another trial and to take enough of it to make sure it would help me. I have taken it over a year now and it has brought wonderful results. I have gained from 98 to 110 pounds and am keeping house now. My friends all notice the change in my health. I will be glad to answer all letters that women write to me about the Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. W. G. MONSON, 1515 Park Ave., Beloit, Wis.

Mrs. Monson is willing to write to any woman suffering from such troubles.

NGINEER WILL SEEK DIVORCE; WIFE IN CUBA

Dartmouth Josselyn, Dartmouth graduate and mechanical engineer, has filed suit for divorce from his wife, Ida Bell Liveradge Josselyn, on grounds of desertion, gross intoxication and unfaithfulness. He seeks custody of their two children, Mary and Priscilla.

The Josselyns were married April 1911, at Manchester, N. H. For a period of years all was happiness and still, the husband says, his wife became a liquor addict. This led to their separation.

Finally, on February 4, Mrs. Josselyn, according to his story, "kidnaped" their two children and fled to La Gloria, Cuba, where her father, now deceased, had a plantation. He was a wealthy sugar grower.

Dry Agents Pose as Divorce Seekers and Raid Reno

Reno, Nev., March 1.—Reno's divorces colony was gasping today at the discovery that two of its most recent additions, who had become quite prominent among the gayer set, were dry enforcement officers, whose activities had brought about thirteen arrests and the closing of a number of places.

One of the agents posed as a film company director and the other appeared in the role of "representative of the steel trust."

9 MORE FELLED BY POISON LIQUOR

Bad liquor continued to exact its toll of victims. Nine more persons, one a woman, were removed to the City Hospital within the last twenty-four hours.

Peter Sullivan, twenty-five years old, of Sullivan street, Charlestown, suffered a severe scalp wound and cuts and bruises of the body when he fell into a car pit at the Lenox street car house. Physicians at the hospital found him to be suffering from alcoholism.

Patrick Cronin, fifty-three years old of Gennesseo street, Roxbury, was picked up by the police at Heath and Centre streets, Roxbury, and removed to the hospital suffering from alcoholism and cuts and bruises.

The others, suffering only from alcoholism, are: Mrs. Catherine Mahoney, forty-eight years old, of Dover street, South End; Edward Smith, nineteen years old, of East Fifth street, South Boston; William Smith, fifty-five years old, of Dayson street, South End; William Muldoon, twenty-five years old, of Linden Park street, Roxbury; Vernon Richardson, twenty years old, of Winthrop; Michael Hanlon, thirty-eight years old, of Hampshire street.

"JUGGLER OF NOTRE DAME" STORY HELPED CONVERT FRED STONE

COMEDIAN TO CONTINUE ON STAGE JUST THE SAME

Billings, Mont., March 1.—The conversion of Fred A. Stone, comedian, really began in Billings, when he appeared at a theatre here February 13.

Stone had been thinking seriously over the matter of church affiliation when his train was held up in South Dakota by a blizzard. When he arrived in Billings he sought a store where Bibles were sold and asked for the best version in stock.

County Commissioner Lou Chapple was in the store and overheard Stone's request. "Here's a sky-pilot now," he said to Stone, beckoning to Rev. Robert Cameron, pastor of the Presbyterian church. "He'll pick what you want."

Stone asked the pastor engaged in conversation and Stone took the minister into his confidence.

"Come along with me," said Rev. Mr. Cameron. He took Stone to the Church Bible room and there conversation was continued.

They also had prayer.

Stone wanted the minister's views as to continuing on the stage as a comedian. Mr. Cameron told him he could be a Christian despite the stage.

To illustrate, he cited the story of "The Juggler of Notre Dame," who, becoming a monk and finding himself a bungler in his tasks, to do the best in him turned to juggling before the statue of the Virgin, to the horror of his brother monks when they surprised him.

Upon their upraidings the Virgin came to the stooped down and gave her protection to the luckless convert.

Stone decided to continue on the stage. Out of that resolution grew his other—to devote a tenth of his income to Christian service.

"SALLIES" IN MOVE AGAINST IMPOSTORS

Colonel W. A. Colonel McIntyre says he is determined to protect the public in the New England province against imposters who go about soliciting funds in the name of The Salvation Army.

NUXATED IRON

Helps make rich, red blood and revitalize weak nerves.

I Set Out to Find the Secret of Iron Muscles Like These

And Found That a Slight Change in Your Daily Meals Will Often Astonishingly Increase Your Strength, Energy, Endurance and Physical and Mental Power

Years ago, I made up my mind that there must be some vital secret that explained the great difference between the physical strength, health and power of strong and weak people you meet every day. One man has muscles like iron, is full of strength and energy and hits hard both mentally and physically. Another is weak, anaemic and run-down. His day's work leaves him tired out and exhausted and he is always ailing, complaining and doctoring, without ever seeming to get any better.

For years I made a special study of these conditions consulting a great number of physicians and chemists. Science has now proved that your real strength, energy and endurance; that mysterious force that enables you to dominate and control others and win in every walk of life, all depend upon the strength and nature of the millions of cells that compose your body and brain, and the physical strength of these cells depends absolutely upon the food you eat—that is, the material with which they are built, just like a house that is built of boards and mud is not so strong as one built of stone and iron. The most important element in building strong forceful cells is a peculiar form of iron found in the husks of grains, peels and skins of certain fruits and vegetables, but modern methods of cooking throw these important things away so that today probably not one person in twenty has 100% iron in his body—a most alarming condition.

If you are anxious to build up your strength and bodily powers, you should at once try mixing a little of this peculiar form of iron with your daily food, to help build strong iron-like cells. Surprising results have been obtained in many cases, in two weeks' time. In fact a former medical inspector and clinical physician of the Board of Health of New York City said to me: "There are countless numbers of men today who at forty are broken in health and steadily going downward in physical and mental decay. Yet there are thousands of the same men who undergo a remarkable transformation the moment they get plenty of iron into their blood." This newer form of iron is comparatively inexpensive and can be obtained from your druggist under the name of Nuxated Iron, to be mixed with your food as directed on each package. Do not make a mistake and get one of the old forms of metallic iron instead of Nuxated Iron, which is a totally different thing. Many a prize-fighter has won championship because of possessing iron which gave the secret of great strength and endurance which comes from having plenty of iron in your blood. It would seem that the average man would realize how much more important it is for him to build up his strength and resistance to disease and go right to the nearest druggist and get a package of Nuxated Iron. I guarantee that you will be delighted with results in one week or your own druggist will refund the full amount you paid.

ARDENT WOOING WON DANCER IN HUB SHOW

Six months ago William Compton was bragging that he would always keep his single blessedness.

That was before he got acquainted with petite Gladys Rickling Laird, delectable little dancer in a local show.

Since that time Compton has seen "saying it" with six-page telegrams, half-hour calls every morning, extravagant flowers and flying visits from his business in New York City.

Finally he exhausted all these expressions of his homage and moved to Boston altogether. He's taken a job as an automobile tire salesman to take up the hours not spent worshipping at the twinkling feet of the tiny dancer.

Declaring that marriage is the surest cure for such slavish devotion, Gladys prescribed a wedding.

So they filed their marriage intentions, and Gladys wired to Ardmore Pa., to invite her mother to the wedding, which is scheduled to take place as soon as the arrangements are completed.

Young Compton's father is Dr. William F. Compton, director of the fashionable Chevy Chase Private School, at Chevy Chase, Maryland. Neither of his parents will attend the impromptu wedding, and Miss Rickling said that although she didn't know whether they objected to the marriage, it really didn't matter very seriously to the enamored Billy.

CLOSED-DOOR TRIAL FOR GIRLS FAVORED

The bill, favored by many women's organizations, for closed-door trials of girls accused of wrong doing, was reported favorably by the joint legislative committee on judiciary, Judge Thomas Weston, arguing for proponents of the bill, said that often a girl will refrain from assisting in prosecution of a man, rather than face open court and the gaze of morbid spectators.

Laddie Boy Does His Bit to Aid Brethren

Washington, March 1.—"Laddie Boy," Airedale pet of the White House, took a hand at helping his "unfortunate brethren" when he visited a benefit bridge party given by the Animal Rescue League here.

Laddie Boy shook hands with those present and went back to the White House, conveying—on his neck—a note of thanks to Mrs. Harding from the league.

BOY DROWNS AS SISTER TRIES TO SAVE HIM

As her tiny fingers gripped the edge of ice in Mystic River, seven-year-old Dorothy Veterman of No. 16 Lyman avenue, Medford, shouted directions to her five-year-old brother. Both had fallen in through the ice.

"Grab my coat, Billie. Hold on tight!" she was saying when rescuers arrived at the scene and saved her. But Willie had sunk to his death. His body was recovered by Metropolitan police officers.

The two children left their home after school and unnoticed by their mother, they wandered to the river. When they had walked a few yards from shore the ice gave way.

They are the children of Mr. and Mrs. George Vetterman. The father is a naval radio operator and at present is in China. He was informed by cable of the tragedy.

CHARGE MRS. BUZZI THREATENED TO KILL HER WEALTHY AFFINITY

BARE NEW LOVES OF SCHNEIDER

Slain Contractor Had Planned Bermuda Trip With Girl Just Before Murder

By International News Service.

New York, March 1.—"I'll finish him as others like him have been finished."

Mrs. Anna Buzzi, held as a material witness in the murder of Frederick Schneider, wealthy contractor spoke those words, according to statements which District Attorney Glennon, of the Bronx, announced today were given to him by two witnes · who said they had heard her threaten the life of the slain man.

A contradiction has crept into the story told by the divorcee who sits moaning in her cell at Morrisania jail.

Questioned by Glennon, she is reported to have said that at 3:30 in the afternoon, less than fifteen minutes after Schneider's supposed departure in the death car, her brother-in-law, William Turco, taxi driver, called at the apartment she occupied with the contractor.

PRISONER IS HYSTERICAL.

"I have not seen Mrs. Buzzi since early in February," Turco told detectives. "My wife and I went to the theatre that night."

Unable to secure a reduction of bail or to obtain immediately the release of Mrs. Buzzi on a writ of habeas corpus, James Donnelly, her attorney, succeeded in securing permission from County Judge Gibbs to visit his client in jail.

This privilege had been denied by Glennon.

"If Mrs. Buzzi is released on a writ of habeas corpus," Glennon told the court, "I will have her arrested on a warrant for suspicion of murder."

Mrs. Buzzi is almost continually hysterical.

PLANNED BERMUDA TRIP.

During the hearing she appeared consumed with terror and stared wildly at her counsel while he fought to secure her release.

The police who are searching for the slayer have taken up the trail of another woman, younger prettier than Mrs. Buzzi, and whose name, "Bernice," scrawled in Schneider's diary, showed that the murdered man had made all plans for a trip to Bermuda with the new love.

All the police have given out is the girl's first name. They say she is the daughter of a wealthy Bronx merchant, and that the diary shows the development of a third love in the dead man's life, for it has been learned by detectives that Schneider was making advances for a reconciliation with his wife, while living with Mrs. Buzzi.

The detectives believe that a jealous woman, learning of the proposed trip to Bermuda, decided to call Schneider to account, and directing his motor on the last fatal trip, made the accounting with the two bullets that crashed through his brain.

TEXTILE UNIONS ASK WAGE BOOST

Fall River, March 1.—James Tansey, president of the Fall River Textile Council, announced today that the council had voted to recommend to the six unions affiliated with it that they petition the Fall River Cotton Manufacturers' Association for an advance in wages.

The council seeks discretionary power in the matter of fixing the amount of the increase to be asked for. Action will be taken by the unions at their regular meetings, March 7 and 14, and a special meeting of the Textile Council will be held March 15 to frame the demand to be made on the manufacturers.

The action by the Textile Council, if supported by its constituent unions, will represent a demand by the principal group of organized operatives among the 30,000 odd mill workers of this center.

The United Textile Workers of America, several weeks ago, announced that they had initiated a movement to obtain a wage increase of 20 per cent. in the cotton mills here, this amount representing restoration of the 22½ per cent. cut imposed on the ratez existing two years ago.

ANONYMOUS ATTACK ON JEWS, CATHOLICS

Albany, N. Y., March 1.—An anonymous letter assailing Governor Smith, the Roman Catholic Church and the Jews has been pouring in upon members of the Legislature for the past day or two. The communications were printed on duplicating machines. Recipients of the letters ascribed authorship to the Ku Klux Klan. Assemblyman Jesse, Republican, New York, will ask the Legislature to investigate.

LANDLORD GIVES HIS SIDE OF "EVICTION"

John Lynch, letter carrier landlord of the premises at No. 97 Mt. Ida road, today denied he had been guilty of heartless procedure in evicting the family of Mr. and Mrs. R. D. MacKinnon, occupants of the second floor.

It had been reported that Mrs. Mary Hubbard, mother of Mrs. MacKinnon, was forced to leave a sickbed she had occupied ten years in order to obey the eviction order.

"The MacKinnons and their family were not evicted," Lynch told the American. "They were requested to move because I wished to occupy the premises myself. Notice was given them in February, and I told them they could have two months to find another home, and if necessary, more time than that. Our relations always have been and still are friendly.

"It is not true that I am renting the premises to people at higher rents. Mrs. MacKinnons and her family of husband, mother, sister-in-law and two children, paid only $28 for her five-room flat, which is very low for the neighborhood."

NEW DIABETES TEST RESTORES DYING GIRL

St. Paul, Mar. 1.—(By Cosmopolitan News Service)—Insulin, the new treatment for diabetes, is undergoing a test here today and the life of a 15-year-old girl is hanging in the balance at the City and County Hospital.

The girl was brought to the hospital Tuesday morning and believed to be dying by physicians who had been making a vain fight against the disease for two years. The insulin treatment was decided on. The extract was obtained through the co-operation of the University of Minnesota and injected under her skin at 6:30 p. m. Tuesday.

Yesterday morning she was conscious, recognized her physicians, knew what was going on in the room and was talking.

Another injection was given.

Later physicians said that her condition was much improved and they believed she would live, although the answer would not be known for several days. A third injection may be given today.

New York, March 1.—Charles Berger was killed when a boiler which was being tested in the factory of Earl C. Maxwell Company in Brooklyn, exploded. He was thrown forty feet, his legs and arms were severed and he died instantly.

EX-CHAMP JEFFRIES GOES IN BANKRUPTCY

Los Angeles, March 1.—James J. Jeffries, formerly heavyweight boxing champion of the world, has filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy in Federal Court. He gave his total liabilities as $292,183 and his total assets as $130,936. He said that of his assets, $124,000 represented real estate and that the secured claims against him totaled $88,266.

SAGE TEA DANDY TO DARKEN HAIR

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Is Grandmother's Recipe to Darken Gray Hair

You can turn gray, faded hair beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night if you'll get a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at any drug store. Those whose hair is turning gray or becoming faded have a surprise awaiting them, because after one or two applications the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth. Grey-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound tonight and you'll be delighted with your dark, handsome hair and your youthful appearance within a few days.

FIND LIQUOR ON PUBLISHER'S YACHT

Los Angeles, March 1.—The yacht Ohio, owned by E. W. Scripps, publisher, of San Diego, Cal., was searched by customs officers, who said they found 168 bottles of liquor aboard. No arrests were made. The yacht is on a voyage around the world. The liquor was taken aboard at Havana several months ago. It was claimed that the liquor had been legally declared at San Diego several days ago.

Paper Frocks May Become Fad of Society For Costume Balls, Says Betty Alden

By BETTY ALDEN.

OVER in gay Paree they have been wearing gorgeous paper dresses to fancy costume balls—a vogue which has even extended along the merriest resorts of the Riviera.

Wherewith, I presume, that when the Comtesse Francois de Bremond d'Ars of Paris holds her sale and exhibition of these articles tomorrow many prospective purchasers will be on hand. However, these paper frocks—which are said to be as practical as they are decorative—will not be the only things on sale. The Comtesse has brought with her beaded bags, wonderful dolls and a host of other things to tempt the eye and empty the purse.

All these things are the handiwork of French gentlewomen, and it is for the purpose of exhibiting and disposing of them that the Comtesse has come to this country. The latter is the house guest of Mr. and Mrs. I. Tucker Burr of Marlboro street, but the sale and exhibition will be held tomorrow from 10 until 8 o'clock at the Horace Binney's residence, No. 91 Commonwealth avenue.

As the articles have been made by French gentlewomen who have been left in dire need by the war, tomorrow's sale should draw a goodly gathering. The Comtesse's hostess, Mrs. Burr, has spent much of her time in France, and there are many others of Boston's smart set who have lived in France and whose sympathies are bound to be aroused.

SPENDING a Winter of study in Rome is Miss Elizabeth Hamlen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul M. Hamlen of Gloucester street. Miss Hamlen, who, I believe, was one of the debs of 1921-22, sailed for abroad last September. She may return to Boston in June.

SCARLET hunting coats, music from a hunter's horn, songs of the chase, and a dinner table representing a hunting field, all went to make a most picturesque event of the recent meeting of fifty M. F. H.'s and former masters of hunts from various parts of the country.

The affair—held in New York at the Biltmore—was the annual meeting of the Master of Foxhounds' Association of America, but Canada had its representatives. A. Henry Higginson of South Lincoln, M. F. H. of the Millbrook Hounds, was re-elected president of the association. Henry G. Vaughan of Boston, M. F. H. of the Norfolk Hunt, being elected secretary-treasurer.

Miniature foxes going to cover, with the "toy figures of hounds and horsemen following, transformed the dinner table into a hunting scene. The waiters, if you please, wore black satin coats, knickerbockers, stockings, pumps and haughty looking white wigs. Modern jazz was dispensed with, the hunter's horn being brought forth while the band of sportsmen lifted voices in hunting songs of olden times.

HELEN BAYLEY, prominent among the girls who made the imported social bow this season, is spending the week at the Hotel Ambassador in New York. With her is her mother, Mrs. James Cushing Bayley of Marlboro street.

Miss Bayley, who is a pretty blonde—tall and slender—went over to Gotham earlier in the season to join in the gayeties of the bud coterie there.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES M. AMORY and Mrs. Reginald Boardman of Boston were among the guests for whom Mrs. Raymond T. Baker gave a dinner at the Garden Grill, Palm Beach. Her other guests included Mr. and Mrs. Sydney J. Colford, Jr., and the latter's daughter, Miss Cathleen Vanderbilt.

$377,000 LOST TO U. S. IN DEAL BY JOHN D., JR.

New York, March 1.—How the sale to John D. Rockefeller, Jr., of the six Rochefoucauld tapestries, "The Hunt of the Unicorn," wholly escaped taxation by the United States government was officially explained. This sale, at a reputed price of $1,150,000, gave a profit reported in art circles at $650,000 to M. Elcoarde Lacarde.

M. Lacarde, a Parisian art dealer, bought the tapestries last Summer in Paris as a speculation from Count the Rochefoucauld at the reported price of $500,000. The represented a handsome fortune in French francs. The tapestries had been in the Rochefoucauld family 500 years.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr.

On his report of a profit of $650,000 on M. Lacarde's sale to Mr. Rockefeller as the stupendous figure of $1,150,000 the Federal income tax would have been $377,000.

M. Lacarde, it was stated, avoided any United States tax at all, by taking the tapestries to England and having the sale made there.

Mr. Rockefeller first saw the tapestries at the Anderson Galleries last November and later sent an agent to England to consummate his purchase of them.

If Mr. Lacarde had made the sale here, his net profit, after paying tax, would have been, at reported figures $273,000, instead of $650,000.

Major Dortsch of the Internal Revenue Department said:

"By some omission in the law, which I cannot explain, there is no luxury tax on the sale of tapestries, though there is on the sale of carpets and rugs.

"But, if the sale had been consummated in the United States, the government could have collected the 3 per cent. normal and the 50 per cent. surtax of the present income tax law on any profit M. Lacarde made by the sale.

"But our investigations showed the sale was completed in London. The tapestries were brought over here last November and put on private exhibition at the Anderson Galleries. Then they were taken to London and there the sale was consummated. According to law, the profit was made in England and not here, and hence we could not collect any tax on it.

Mrs. Frances Jeffrey of No. 32 Everett avenue, Everett, has appealed to the Boston American to find her son, Peter Jeffrey, aged seventeen, who ran away from home last September.

Peter Jeffrey.

Peter, who lost his left leg seven years ago in a railroad accident, is a cripple. His family planned to send him to a State school for cripples. He refused to go. When his family insisted, he packed his bag and left home. He has not been heard from since.

His mother dying of cancer. His family believe he is somewhere in Boston. "If only I could see my son I should die happy," she told a reporter. Meanwhile her six children are making every effort to find him.

Peter is five feet, two inches tall, of stocky build and weighs about 126 pounds.

ITALY SEEKS TO WIN FOREIGN INVESTORS

By International News Service.

Rome, March 1.—Drastic financial reforms are being made by the Fascisti government to encourage private enterprise, to attract foreign capital and reduce taxes. In an exclusive statement to International News Service, Minister of Finance de Stefani outlined the government's program as follows:

"The government does not want to contract any more loans to the State. It is our aim to reduce the loans already outstanding. We wish to encourage foreign capital and we wish to increase private employment. To attract money from the outside it is proposed to exempt foreign capital until the end of 1923."

The government has decided to transfer the Italian telephone system and part of the telegraph system to private enterprise. Heretofore they have been owned and operated by the government, but it is believed that the services will be cheaper and more efficient if taken out of politics.

Bright Spots in Shadowland

THOMAS H. INCE became a railroad magnate in order to film several shots in "The Sunshine Trail," a comedy-drama starring Douglas MacLean. A railroad train is used in several of the scenes of the picture and Ince, when he read of a small branch road near the California, Nevada, Arizona boundary line that was to be sold for junk, promptly purchased the entire road and added it to the list of the Ince stock "props." Hereafter train wrecks, accidents and races with autos and Pullman car scenes will be staged at will in Ince productions and there will be no terrific rental price to pay.

POST IN PERSON.

"THERE is a strong possibility," says Sol Lesser, "that we will 'road show' the first Guy Bates' Post feature, presenting Mr. Post in person in a dramatic sketch taken from the screen. When this episode is reached in the screening the picture will disappear and Mr. Post with his supporting company will take up the action in person. I hope that we will be able to disclose the genius of Guy Bates Post on the screen, as well as on the stage, and to give him that distinction that he has for so many years enjoyed as a footlight favorite."

WEARS BOY'S CLOTHES.

IN spite of the fact that nearly every woman longs for the slim, graceful figure which will enable her to wear masculine attire becomingly, it is a fact well recognized by artists and modistes that very few women really look well in men's clothes. Maude Adams and Marie Dore have been notable stage exceptions. Both these women were the lucky possessors of straight, slender forms, which looked quite as well in severe mannish garb as in the frills and ruffles of femininity. Now comes Marion Davies in the piquant role of "Pat" O'Day in the Cosmopolitan picture "Little Old New York." Miss Davies is very much the saucy boy in this picture.

YOUNGEST STAR.

CALLISTA RIDDLES has made a good get-away to screen fame. At the age of five months she has played a featured role in Gasnier's next picture, "Mothers-in-Law." She takes lightly the distinction of supporting such stars as Gaston Glass, Ruth Clifford and Joseph Swickard.

FLAPPER FINDS HANDY BAG IS 'SAW'S BUZZ'

Flappers—have you a Handy Bag?

Mollie Cliff, a real honest-to-goodness flapper, who flapped her way to a headline position in big time vaudeville, flops this question.

Mollie has one. She actually paid cash for it. It's a fact. Then, after she had done her shopping, Mollie sat down and penned a note telling all about the advantages of the Handy Bag.

"Say," she writes, "the gent that doped out the Handy Bag is the lamb's la la. I'm all for him. The bag is sure the saw's buzz. It just became a knockout with me. Flappers and flippers oughta fit-flap to it and glom one of these provision carriers."

So, flappers, there you have it, right straight from a girl that makes her bread and butter doing honest flapper business on the stage. Get in line.

ALLIES REFUSE U. S. REPARATION SHARE

Paris, March 1.—On the ground that the United States signed a separate peace treaty with Germany and should have provided for the matter then, the Allies today will flatly refuse America's demand that Germany's first billion gold marks already paid and divided without consulting America, be reapportioned. The American demand is made so that a part of the money may be used to pay for the army of occupation the United States left on the Rhine at the request of the Allies.

Bonar Law

Premier Bonar Law has already refused to agree to the French proposal to make Germany pay for the Ruhr occupation in advance.

TO PROTEST AGAINST EXECUTIONS IN ERIN

A meeting to protest against execution of Irish Republican prisoners of war in Ireland and to commemorate the anniversary of the birthday of Robert Emmnet will be held in Faneuil Hall at 8 o'clock Sunday evening, March 4, under auspices of the State directorate of the American Association for Recognition of the Irish Republic. John F. Harrigan, who has just returned from the conference of State presidents with the envoys of the Irish Republic, and Lawrence Ginnell, chairman in Chicago, will speak. William H. O'Brien will preside.

ANTI-JEW AGITATION BRINGS REPRIMAND

Syracuse, March 1.—An official reprimand for the seventeen members of the senior council of students at Syracuse University is expected to follow the discussion by the council of agitation to discourage the enrollment of Jewish students at the university. Chancellor Charles W. Flint summoned the members of the student body to explain why the university will not tolerate anti-Semitic agitation of any kind.

BABY GIRL IS SOUGHT TO EASE BOY'S GRIEF

WANTED — One baby girl, between the ages of twelve and fifteen months, to become a sister to little Billy—whose only sister died. A comfortable home with plenty of play toys will be furnished the little Miss, if she can but make Billy, Jr., smile once again.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Cuthbertson, of No. 12 Lincoln street, Charlestown, today sent a broadcast appeal to the residents of Lynn, where she formerly lived, to assist them in adopting a baby girl, who could take the place of their little one, who died a few days ago. "We are heartbroken," the mother said. "Billy is grieving so for his little sister that he is very ill and will neither eat nor sleep. The doctor says our only hope is to adopt a baby girl as near like our own as possible."

The baby girl must have light hair and blue eyes.

GUN POWDER CLUE IN LAWRENCE FIRE

Lawrence, March 1.—Startling evidence is expected today in the case of Abraham Bardwell and Mike Macarone, both of whom are charged with setting the fire at No. 249 Elm street, January 20, which cost the lives of eight persons. The hearing will last the entire day. "I'm sick of this damned place and some day I'd like to burn it up," is the statement credited to Bardwell by the owner of the property, Hanna Skeirik.

Abraham Bardwell

Among the witnesses will be Walter Wedger of Boston, State chemist, who will be heard in connection with traces of black gunpowder found in the room where the fire started.

'Gerry' 41 Years Old

GERALDINE FARRAR.

New York, March 1.—Geraldine Farrar, world famed opera star, passed her forty-first birthday here. She had a busy day keeping track of the many times forty-one floral pieces and congratulations that poured in on her in a steady stream all day. Interwoven in the birthday felicitations were many wishes for success in her divorce suit against Lou Tellegen, which will be continued today. Miss Farrar was born at Melrose, Mass., studied in Boston, Paris and Berlin and starred in the Opera Comique, Paris, and the Metropolitan Opera House, New York.

SISTER OF SLAIN MAN ASKS FOR PROTECTION

Los Angeles, March 1.—Mrs. Blanche F. Remington, sister of Earle Remington, electrical engineer slain here February 15, has appealed to the district attorney for protection from a "mysterious surveillance" which, she said, began about the time her brother was killed.

She said she had been followed by persons unknown to her on several occasions; that four persons followed her in an automobile last Sunday, and that several times recently at night she had heard whispered conversations outside the window of her home.

RUSSELL AGAIN REPUDIATES PATERNITY OF "DREAM BABY"

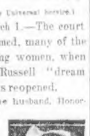
BARES PACT MADE WITH WIFE

Many Women Crowd to Hear Testimony; One Woman Juror Quits the Hearing

(Special Cable to Universal Service.)

London, March 1.—The court room was jammed, many of the spectators being women, when the famous Russell "dream baby" case was reopened.

Counsel for the husband, Honorable John Hugo Russell, heir of Lord Ampthill, former viceroy of India, again denied that he was the father of the boy who, if the former verdict in favor of Mrs. Russell stands, will be entitled to inherit the Ampthill title and estates. He again injected the name of the recently named new co-respondent, Edgar Jacquard Mayer, a very wealthy man.



John H. Russell.

WOMAN JUROR QUITS.

Before any of the evidence was taken an unmarried woman juror, who was told that the evidence would be unfit to hear, voluntarily retired.

Sir Edward Marshall Hall, for Russell, insisted that there was a prenuptial pact by which the husband agreed that as a part of their married life they were to maintain purely platonic relations. He declared that this agreement had been religiously kept and that therefore the boy born on November 15, 1921, could not be his.

"HUGGED HERBERT."

Then were introduced letters from Mrs. Russell to her husband during his absence on duty as a submarine officer. In her letters, after calling him "Darling Old Angel," she said she was "very lonely in her bed," and that after crying over his absence she had "hugged Herbert," which counsel explained, was a hot water bottle.

Mrs. John H. Russell.

Encouraged by the letter Russell again "pleaded that she become a real wife," to which she replied that "one separate soul is a thing to sin at," and declared that "all ton beauty attributed to closer relationships was camouflage to cover the pandering of ardent husbands to the lower side of human nature."

PERMITS EASY CHANGE IN WAVE LENGTH

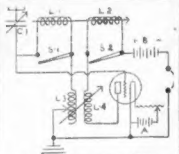
A receiver that permits easy change from short waves to long is shown in the accompanying diagram.

Such a receiver would be useful for anyone who wished to listen in to NAA at Arlington, which transmits at 110 metres. For this purpose, L1 and L2 should be 35-turn bank eyeconh coils.

For the ordinary 350 and 400 meter stations the two switches should be closed, which will short-circuit the loading coils.

Note that each tuned circuit must have a separate loading coil. If you are using a three-circuit regenerative, instead of the two-circuit shown in the diagram, you must insert three loading coils and three switches, one in the primary, one in the secondary and one in the plate circuit.

Varies Wave Length



SHORT-LONG RECEIVER

A short-long wave receiver, in which the change from short to long waves may be easily made by means of two S. P. S. T. switches. C1 is a 23-plate vernier condenser. L1 and L2 are honeycomb coils, the value of which will vary according to the wave length it is desired to receive. L3 and L4 are the usual primary and tickler of a regenerative receiver. S1 and S2 are the switches, which short circuit the two loading coils when the short wave stations are being received. Sent in by E. L. Crandell of Orkney street, Brookline.

FOUR POSES BY MRS. THERESA MARANGI, ON TRIAL FOR MURDER OF HER BROTHER-IN-LAW

OBJECTED TO MEN'S ACTIONS

Refused to Go on Floor With President Green, Then Resigned

When several of the prettiest girls in the Dancers' Club boycotted George W. Green of [illegible] the trouble which has just reached the courts began, it was learned today.

The girls refuse to dance with Green. A New Year's party was [illegible] the girls refused to [illegible] Green. Some member urged that the boycott was what led to a fall in equity seeking to restrain the dismissed fac[illegible]tion from being the name of the club.

The action is most unusual. It is said to be the first case in the State in which participants in a social union of this kind have recourse to the courts. As far as is known, the members have never had to contend for a name, and prominent names were signed to the petition which seeks "to save the name of the club for its originators."

Mrs. Enid K. Norcross, Ada Paul Edward W. Deering, Cyril E. Silver Ella B. Austin and George F. Green are the petitioners. They charge the opposition side the club's name and formed a new organization solely through the promptings of jealousy, vanity and personal ambition.

The name as offenders George A. Benard William F. Wood, Nellie W. Whittemore, Priscilla W. Nelson, Ellen L. Greene, Daisy C. Miller and Robert K. Nelson. Some of these declare they withdrew from the Dancers' Club because they objected to the action of some of its officers their objections will be aired in court.

The first witness today was Sergeant Harry T. Grace of Joy street station who testified briefly the day before in identification of some exhibits.

Grace testified today that on the night of November 23—the night before the shooting—he went to No. 42 Lynde street [illegible] of Mrs. Theresa Marangi, accompanied by a squad [illegible] from headquarters and several officers from Joy street.

They arrived at the house between 1 and 1 o'clock in the morning. There was no answer to their knock. A panel in the front door was broken in and they entered the front parlor.

The jury was then excused while Assistant District Attorney Caro argued on admissability of evidence to show a motive. This evidence was excluded. The jury was then recalled.

Evidence that Marangi was shot with dum-dum bullets, and the charge that three men were in the room at the time of the killing, featured the trial.

It is [illegible] that dum dum or cross-hatched bullets were used was brought out by Assistant District Attorney Maurice Caro in examination of Medical Examiner George Burgess Magrath.

William H. Scharton, counsel for the defense, made the statement he would show three men, beside Marangi, were in the room at the time of the shooting.

He also brought into the case two pistols in addition to one of .38 caliber originally offered by the government, and believed to be the murder weapon.

Another feature of the evidence was the admission by Dr. Magrath, under cross examination, that he was receiving pay to testify as an expert in addition to his regular remuneration.

Tendered Royal Reception By City Club Members

The new magnate was tendered a royal reception by several hundred members of the City Club at a dinner arranged by John Champ Bell of Winter League fame. BOSTON COLLEGE AND B. A. A. IN ICE HOCKEY TITLE GAME

EAGLE MUST FLY HIGH TO KEEP CLEAN SLATE

Boston College will endeavor to keep its season's hockey slate clean tonight at the Arena, but the Eagle sextet must play its best. It will oppose the crack B. A. A. team, probable winners of the Eastern division of the United States League series. Sensational hockey is expected when the two speedy teams clash.

Sonny Foley

The record for the Eagle six is remarkable, for it has eleven straight victories. It is the only unbeaten college team in the United States and has scored forty goals and held opponents to thirteen goals. But the B. A. A. record is hardly less impressive, for the Unicorn team has won sixteen victories and has suffered only one defeat. One game resulted in a tie. The Unicorns have made seventy goals and the opponents held to twenty-one.

Hockey experts look for a B. A. A. victory, but it would not occasion much surprise, even to them, if the team from University Heights scored a triumph. Captain Garrity and his players are in excellent shape and have the short passing game down to a science.

There is doubt that the B. A. A. will be able to hold its full strength in the game tonight. Captain Jus. McCarthy has been confined to his bed for the past few days, and although he expects to figure in part of tonight's match, he isn't likely to show his well known speed. If he does show a falling off in form, it will probably affect the Unicorn's chances to win.

Leo Morrissey, Captain Ed Garrity and Jack Fitzgerald are played reliable defensive pair for the Eagle. These two have seen a great deal of small and Garrity to know what to expect.

Boston College will have plenty of support. The fans will give the collegians a reception after their great trip through New York State. The whole B. C. student body will be at the game and organized cheering will be in order.

Duluth will play the Vics Monday and Boston College Tuesday.

Victorias Face "Some" Campaign for Few Days

The Victorias have "some" campaign for the next few days. Tomorrow night and Saturday night the Vics play Berlin in Berlin, N. H. After the game with Duluth here Monday the Vics will have a day's rest before they tackle the B. A. A. Wednesday night in the decisive game of the Eastern group series.

New Haven will play Boston College here Friday week and the following night will tackle the Victorias. B. A. A. and Boston Hockey Club will play their final league game in the other part of a double header.

HARVARD WINS RUBBER FROM PRINCETON, 1-0

Although Princeton was a decided favorite before the hockey [illegible] at the Arena, Harvard came out on top with a 1 to 0 verdict. This gives the Crimson the third game and series over the Tiger outfit and consequently makes the Cambridge team a favorite for the Big Three championship.

It was a slashing fine game for spectators, but unfortunately many fans were unable to gain admission because of the large attendance of college students and alumni.

The rubber contest was replete with thrills.

The stars were Captain Van Gerbig of Princeton and Beals of Harvard. They made some of the greatest plays ever seen in the Boston rink, and they were the chief factors in most of the plays.

The game was won in the opening period when Beals happened to come out of a scrimmage and slip the puck into the Princeton goal. Gleason, the Tiger tender, failed to see it.

Harvard Players Should Think They Are Lucky

Harvard's players should consider themselves very fortunate, as the Visitors played a much faster game, and at all times were on the go, up and down and all over the surface. Princeton was much faster than the Crimson, and to say the least Bigelow, the Harvard cage man, was blessed in more ways than one and apparently had a string of horseshoes about his neck.

Shortly after the two teams got going Davis, the brilliant young Tiger, started a march for the Crimson goal. He was stopped by George Owen.

Beals Snatched the Disc From a Scrimmage

After six minutes of fast and dizzy hockey, Beals snatched the rubber disc from a scrimmage behind the goal line and drove it by Gleason, the Tiger net artist, for the only goal of the game.

Davis and Van Gerbig made many attempts to shatter the Crimson defence. A most spectacular piece of work was Van Gerbig's speedy skating and circling of the entire Crimson team. His attempt at goal was futile, however.

There was action galore in the second stanza. Scull, right defence, broke loose and sped down through the left lane, while the Harvard followers sat uneasy, but again Bigelow made a wonderful stop and turned the lozenger clear of the cage.

Goal Umpire Could Not See Tiger Goal

It seemed that one of the Tiger players pushed the rubber into the [illegible] pit for a counter. But Goal Umpire Ferris failed to see it and it did not count. The management secured a new ump for the third period and Geesie who was replaced by Burke, went to the side lines.

Shortly after the opening of the final session Captain Owen and Van Gerbig were sent to the "cooler" for tripping. They were hardly out a minute when Beals was sent into the "pen" to keep them company.

Bigelow got into a mix-up and lost his stick. It was returned only after a strenuous session in front of the net was over.

All in all it was a great game and the large gathering of spectators left contented and happy.

JOHNNY DARCY IN GO WITH CLINTON

The trend of travel will be towards Lowell this evening, where Johnny Clinton, lightweight extraordinary, meets Johnny Darcy of New York for ten rounds. The show will be staged by the Moody A. C., which has been putting on stellar attractions.

Bennie Valgar, the French Flash, has run out of his match with Walter Lee of Denver, Col., which was to be staged at the Moody A. C. of Lowell on the night of March 6. Somebody must have whispered in Valgar's ear how good Lee is. Matchmaker Cecil Dodge lost no time in getting an opponent for Lee, and he signed up Bennie DePonta to battle Lee for the colored light weight championship of the world.

BREAST STROKE RACES FOR NOVICES

In addition to the N. E. A. A. A. U. 150-yard swimming championship to be held at Worcester tonight there will be a [illegible] breast stroke event. This is the first of [illegible] like events held by different clubs in the A. A. U. The breast stroke has been considered passe in some sections of the country, while in others it is coming back stronger than ever. Many experts claim it will turn out speed marvels forget the great mass of people who want to swim the breast or side strokes.

Jack Wallace

The general opinion of those who study water safety methods is that the breast and side strokes are superior to the modern crawl stroke in saving people from drowning.

In order that the breast stroke shall not become a lost art, the Humane Society of Massachusetts awards three sets of prizes—gold, silver and bronze—to stimulate breast stroke swimming.

Those events are open only to novice swimmers. The first will be held by the Worcester Y. M. C. A., the second by the Boston Red Cross [illegible] and the third by the Metropolitan A. A. U. [illegible]

Lavan leaves for Columbus, Georgia, tomorrow for the Spring training. STEAMSHIP officials report to us that there has been a remarkable falling off in sea sickness. Now, if Doctor Copeland will for some is easy to find. Just take a peek at the streets. One of nature's most violent tempests would seem smooth and simple to anybody who has been riding over the ice and snow ruts for the past few months.

Physical examination of the populace would probably disclose that an average of eighth of an inch of height had been knocked off, by heads bumping taxi and car roofs. A few trips along any of our main stems or through the cluttered downtown side streets would make anyone immune to anything but looping the loop. Hasn't anyone anything to speak of for the last two or three weeks.

BOSTON AMERICAN'S TWO PAGES OF LAUGHTER

Engagement Formulas

By Les Conklin

ENGAGEMENT announcements are always popular because they enable the parties concerned to get their names in the papers without paying for it.

In the smaller communities, it is not necessary to announce the engagement because everybody knows all about it long before the poor fish is hooked.

When a millionaire's son runs off with a chorus girl or when a society queen proposes to her riding master, it is customary to launch the announcement in headlines on the front page. In other cases the correct form is as follows:

"Mr. and Mrs. David X. Dingleberry announce the engagement of their daughter, Sophronia, to Mr. Cyril Shortcash of Ashcroh. The date of the wedding will be announced as soon as Mr. Shortcash's boss gives him a raise."

If it happens that the girl's parents are dead or in jail, the announcement may be worded like this:

"The many friends of Miss Henrietta Hasenpfeffer will be glad to know that she has at last gotten engaged. The lucky man is Mr. Byron B. Bingbile of Leavenworth, Kan., and Atlanta, Ga. Miss Hasenpfeffer is not wearing a ring at present because Mr. Bingbile has been unable to get his ring back from his latest fiancee, but he has promised to get her a solitaire as soon as he can crack another safe."

Breaking engagements is a delicate proposition for both parties concerned. The announcement should always be made by the girl's parents, in order to create the impression that she gave the man the mitten, instead of being jilted. The following form is often used:

"Mr. and Mrs. Fulonius Pretsel-man announce that the engagement between their daughter Flossie, and Solomon O'Shaughnessy is at end because Mr. Pretzelman lost all his money in a stock transaction."

engagement was announced to intimate friends would throw an in-formal air to the affair that it is an end. The text is usually worded in this manner:

"Dear Ruby—The Prince of Wales and I had a spat last night which made me break our engagement. I asked him if he was marrying me for my money and he said no, he wouldn't marry me for all the money in the world.

Your heart-broken

"KATINKA."

When it is necessary to postpone the wedding announcements should be sent out by the parents of the bride. The cards should be clean and printed in English. The following is a sam

"Owing to the fact that the bridegroom has been shot in the thigh, Mr. and Mrs. Aloysius Dingbat are compelled to defer the festivities for their daughter's wedding to the Duke de Marmalade while he is convalescing in Sing Sing."

YOUR baby isn't doing well his color is not good, but feed him Matchless Milk a spell and try some Pattern's Food. I guess I ought to know a lot about the little dears. I've helped raise every neighbor's tot for forty seven years. There's not a baby on this street but what has had my care; I've told their mas what they should eat and what they ought to wear. Miss Sally Smithers told the truth, she was a dame who knew far more about the ways of youth than any parents do. For by her ingle nook she is as cozy as could be with Fool, the parrot, and the cat consuming catnip tea. She read thick volumes on the way a baby should be fed, the calories he'd need each day, the time to go to bed. She knew just what his weight should be and how he ought to act, and level of all, her theory was never marred by fact. The baby in Miss Sally's books would capture every prize, for he's a wonder as to looks an never, never cries. I often think it's somewhat sad more theories can't be backed and saved from going to the bad by sons accord with fact. But, though the maiden ladies claim a baby should not weep, the kiddies try the time worn game to keep their pas from sleep. Old Earth would be a perfect place—too perfect, it may be —if we could run the human race by any theory. No man has made things go so far, indeed, to be exact, there's always been a state of war in theory vs. fact.

Egyptian flappers dallied with their maps
No doubt that paint and powder were in style
With oils and lotions now unknown, perhaps.

Today the damsel and the dame as well
Pore o'er their recipes and beauty books
From grandam to the noisy little belle
They seek that wonder prize—the face de luxe.

But now 'tis said there is a better way
To win the rosy cheek, the matchless face—
The humble pickle, taken once a day,
Will quickly beautify the human race.

Somehow we had a notion that the dill
Gave one a twisted end a sorry map—
But these are wonder days, perhaps it will Improve the looks of ladies—yes, maybe.

KEEP MUM ON YOUR FAILURES

You have to talk telling about some of your undertakings that were failures. All excuses you for not being in a better position today.

Irrespective of the fact that such failures may not have been due to lack of brains on your part, the fact that you were a loser, does not reflect creditably on you. Therefore it is unwise to give too much emphasis to your losses.

Successful men don't enjoy hearing a recital of failures they want to hear about successes and the methods of successful men.

You will get more attention from such men if you have something unique and good and business to offer for the future.

Don't cry in the past.

It is a weeping hole.

The future is the important time for you.

Think and think of the future—and plan for it.

Forget the past. You need all your thinking power to help you in the present and the future.

WHEN A GIRL MARRIES

Anne Attended Carl's Dinner, but Daisy Kept Her Uncomfortable by Her "Catty" Remarks About Things and Her Apologies

By ANN LISLE

MANUELO ORTIZ and Rosa drove me downtown from Betty's apartment. There I found Betty plugging away as if she'd always sat at a desk in the office of an advertising consultant. Miss May was plainly delighted at the attitude of her protege. And at noon they [illegible] trotted off together, with the evident and whole hearted intention to continue business instructions during the lunch hour.

While they were gone Carl Booth telephoned and pleaded that I dine with him and Daisy that very evening. I hadn't the heart to refuse. And when I broke the news to Betty a while [illegible] she actually grabbed at the chance of solitude as if it were a respite, crying out that she'd have the evening free to stay at the office and read the back files on the Derringforth stuff.

On Her Mind

"Don't have me on your mind, dear," she said. "The job fills the days—and even if the nights are sleepless I know you're near."

When she plunged back to her work Miss May and I exchanged glances of delight. If the job gets Betty—the blues can't.

So it was with a high heart that I started off for Carl's dinner. But Daisy dampened my feelings with her first words:

"Hello, dear!" she cried, kissing me artificially on both cheeks. "I'm so glad you could come to this little twenty-four of ours. We are too eager to see our friends to wait for a decent place to entertain them."

"It's bully to see you, Barbara Anne," broke in Earl so cordially that I had a relieved feeling he hadn't noticed Daisy's capriciousness. "I'm tickled to pieces to see you at all and 50 per cent. more so to see you looking so [illegible]

"Anne has work she likes. She isn't bored to death," sneered Daisy, but before I could recover my grasp for a reply the bell rang and the next instalment of guests arrived. Irma, looking like an apple blossom, wrapped in a mink of the sky, came first, and after her the courtly Mr. Haldane and Tom Mason. With a word of greeting to the men Daisy swept Irma and me into her boudoir which I [illegible] as that's all she [illegible]

"Here's everything you want to [illegible] with [illegible] and I'm from the room. "I'm a bride, so I [illegible] pretty personal things— anyway."

"What a lot of room she has," said Irma admiringly. "I guess you call it pep."

Crying Heartily

That wasn't what I'd have called it by any means, so in order to avoid criticising my hostess I turned my attention to Irma herself, crying [illegible]

"You're adorable in that dainty pale green. My dear, you look like a school girl just old enough to have her first pretty frock. And it's a duck of a dress."

"Uncle bought it for me," smiled Irma. "He was walking with Mr. Mason Saturday afternoon. They do that—to the chess club—now. And he saw it in a window and he said they both thought it looked like me. Isn't that funny? It just shows what nice little boys they are, doesn't it?"

"Come on, old lady, we'll join your nice boys."

Then happily and with laughter that happiness brings ever nothing and less than nothing, we hurried out to the living room.

"No wonder it took you so long," chirped Daisy. "You got such good effects. I hope you took all the powder and cream you wanted. I have plenty—keep things just for my [illegible]

Carl was so busy with Mr Haldane that her catty suggestion escaped him, but the flash in Tom's eyes was distaste, and not amusement.

ROYAL ROMANCES

LOUIS I. OF BAVARIA AND LOLA MONTEZ

By Barbara Bayne

AMONG all the "left-hand" loves that pulse and throb through the pages of history, there is none that has so intrigued the fancy of three continents as did that of brilliant, restless Lola Montez.

Born in Ireland of an Irish father and a beautiful Spanish mother, [illegible] that [illegible] beauty, wit and courage gave Maria Dolores Eliza Rosanna Gilbert a flying start in life.

Her father's regiment, transferred to India, the "pet" of the 44th" became accustomed to the almost regal atmosphere of court life in Calcutta. Sent to England to be educated, Lola eloped at 15 with a penniless subaltern and accompanied him back to India.

But soon desiring her freedom she offered him a pretext for a divorce and sailed away. Later, when the world rang with the name of the glorious creature for whom a monarch lost his crown, it must have struck him as odd that he should have held so precious a possession in his hand for a moment without prizing it.

Beautiful, sparkling, voluptuous and bewitching, Lola, in Madrid, assumed the name of Lola Montez and became a dancer. At her London debut the powerful Lord Ranelagh, "Prince Regent" she had scorned, hissed her from a box and it killed her act. Instead of accepting defeat Lola almost laughed.

In every capital of Europe Lola danced and played with the hearts of men. In Warsaw it was Prakiewicz, the most ruthless man Russia ever produced in St. Petersburg, Count Nicholas I.; in Dresden Franz Liszt; in Paris—into the very circle of the Olympians of the boulevards Lola penetrated,—it was Alexandre Dumas pere, Dujarrier, editor of La Presse who was killed in a duel, and others succumbed to her charms.

As ambition soared, sentiment waned, and Lola determined to attain position and power in Munich, by a clever ruse, she secured an interview with Louis I.

THE ENEMIES OF WOMEN By BLASCO IBANEZ

Prince Michael Helps Duchess de Delille to Make Her Bed

THE STORY TO DATE.

Prince Michael Fedor, a Russian of fabulous wealth, is at Monte Carlo while the Great War is on. With him is his friend, Attilio Castro, and other acquaintances. He announces, to the amazement of his hearers, that he is ruined. The Prince proposes that Castro and a few of their friends live together with the proviso that no women shall enter their lives. They will be known as "The Enemies of Women." Castro tells the Prince he has seen the Duchess de Delille. She calls at the Villa Sirena and asks the Prince to finance her gambling system. He refuses, but grows interested in her, and later calls at her home.

By Vicente Blasco Ibanez,
Author of "The Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse" and Other Novels of World Renown

THE bodies of some of the passersby were intact, retaining their former strength and agility in all their limbs. Seen from behind they had kept all the vigor and suppleness of youth. But they walked abreast, holding tightly to one another's arms, their eyes lost in darkness, tapping the pavement with a stick which had taken the place of the vanished sword.

Michael stopped in the upper gardens to look down at the Casino. Around the garden rail and on the benches backing up to it one could observe the living soul of Monte Carlo. The devotees who lived in Monte Carlo were likewise flocking there and mingling with the people who had come from other places. They all mounted the marble steps, following the three stair carpets held in place by brass rods that glistened in the sun.

"And to think that we're at war!" Michael thought. "And many of these who have gotten up early to make the trip and those who live here, too, have sons, or brothers, or husbands, who at the present moment are fighting, and dying, perhaps!"

Love of life, love of pleasure and the vain hope of winning worked like an anaesthetic, causing them all to rise above their worries, and forget, so that they were able to live entirely in the present moment.

This general rush for the opening of the gaming hall disgusted the Prince and caused him to halt in his descent of the gentle slope of the gardens. It was repugnant to him to mix with the crowd that was loitering in the neighborhood of the Casino.

To Surprise Alicia

His desire to retrace his steps gave him an idea. "Suppose I go and surprise Alicia at her home. She would be so pleased!"

She had been at Villa-Sirena twice since her first visit. A chance meeting in the street when she was walking along with her friend Clorinda had served as a pretext for another visit to the refuge in the beautiful gardens of the "Enemies of Women." He found the "Generalessa" less hostile and dominating than he had imagined; but he could not understand Castro's passion for her. In spite of her beauty it seemed to him that he was talking to a man. The Duchess had complained that day of Michael's failure to call on her.

"I'm always the one who is looking you up; you never deign to visit my house. How poor I really am!"

Remembering her humble protest, the Prince no longer hesitated. Turning his back on the Casino, he began to ascend the sloping streets in the direction of the frontier line separating Monte Carlo from Bedusommeil, streets that displayed names recalling Spring: The Street of Roses, of the Carnations, of the Violets, of the Orchids.

He entered a short avenue formed by a double row of garden fences. He caught a glimpse of the houses between columns of palm trees, and the firm leaves of the large magnolias. As he went along he read the names of the small estates carved on little plaques of red marble, placed at the entrances to the grounds. "Villa-Rosa"; here it was.

He pushed open the iron gate, which was ajar, without hearing the sound of a voice or the barking of a dog to greet his presence.

He saw a small garden half deserted, grown up with weeds at the foot of the untrimmed trees and covering the space that had formerly been occupied by flower beds. The rest was more carefully tended, but it was a vegetable garden, with rectangles of green stuffs, intensively cultivated.

Lubimoff approached without meeting anyone. In occurred to him that the gardener must have been the man with the dog, whom he had met as he turned into the street.

Then he mounted the four steps at the entrance. Here, too, the door was ajar, and pushing it all the way open, he found himself in a hallway with stairs leading to the upper story.

There was no one in sight. He tried the doors of the adjoining rooms, and found them locked. There was not a sound, as though the house were deserted. But the silence was suddenly broken by a voice floating down the stairway. It was a faint voice, singing a slow, and English air. The song was accompanied by a sound of dull blows, as though hands were beating and shaping up some large unresisting object.

Michael thought he recognized Alicia's voice. He coughed several times without result; he was not heard. He was about to call to let her know he was there, but refrained, through a sudden impulse to play a little joke on her. Why shouldn't he surprise her by going upstairs, the one part of the house where she was now living? His hesitation vanished. Upstairs he would go!

From the first landing he saw several doors, but only one was open, and it was from that one that the sounds of the song and the thumping were coming. A woman bending over a bed, was holding out her arms and vigorously shaking up a pillow. Instinctively she felt that some one was standing behind her, and turning around she gave an exclamation of surprise on seeing Michael in the doorway. He, for his part, was no less surprised to recognize the woman as Alicia; an Alicia dressed in an elegant but old negligee, with crumpled gloves on her hands, and a veil wrapped around her hair.

"You! It's you!" she exclaimed. "How you frightened me!"

Immediately she recovered her composure, and smiled at Michael when he tried to explain his intrusion. He had not met any one; the gate and door were open. She too excused herself, in turn. It was Sunday; Valeria her companion, had gone to Nice to take lunch with a family she knew; her maid and the gardener's wife were at mass; the old man had gone out a moment ago to see some friends.

After these mutual explanations they both remained silent, looking at each other hesitatingly, not knowing what to say, but still smiling.

"You making your bed?" Michael remarked just to say something.

A Decided Novelty

"So you see. This is rather different from my bedroom in Paris. It is hardly the 'study' that I took you to, either. Times have changed."

Michael gravely nodded assent. Yes, times have changed.

"At any rate," Alicia laughed, "you must confess that there is a certain novelty in seeing the Duchess de Delille, madcap Alicia, making her bed."

The Prince nodded again. Indeed, it was a novelty, something one could not see every day.

A Russian Prince of Fabulous Wealth and Some Friends Bind Themselves to Bar All Women From Lives

DAILY HOROSCOPE

Mary Blake Says:

Today Lucky if You Are DETERMINED

THE early part of today is not particularly favorable, but promises better after 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

Those born under the auspices of Pisces are very often inclined to be little their own judgment and to seek advice from others which is very often fraught with danger and great risk. It is quite likely that some business problem involving important issues to you requires a settlement today; if possible, it would be prudent to defer making any decision until late in the day.

If a decision must be rendered earlier, do not be guided by the advice that friends may give you when it is contrary to that which you yourself think is right. Act on your own judgment and you will not regret the result; vacillate, and results will happen for which you will be sorry.

Today may call for a final decision with regard to some family trouble that is causing you and yours worry and anxiety; in this case, in the early part of the day, patience is recommended and no hasty action should be taken by you.

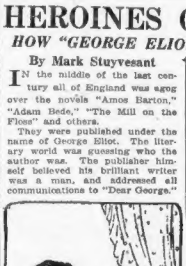
HEROINES OF HISTORY

HOW "GEORGE ELIOT" BECAME FAMOUS

By Mark Stuyvesant

IN the middle of the last century all of England was agog over the novels "Amos Barton," "Adam Bede," "The Mill on the Floss" and others.

They were published under the name of George Eliot. The literary world was guessing who the author was. The publisher himself believed his brilliant writer was a man, and addressed all communications to "Dear George."



George Eliot and Lewis

But Dickens maintained it was a woman by whose pen these masterpieces were written.

And Mary Ann Evans' identity might have remained long a secret had it not been for an unscrupulous minister, who announced that he was the gifted writer, and even went so far as to receive at entertainments given in his honor.

It was then that Miss Evans announced her authorship.

Brought up in England in a family of comfortable means, Mary Ann had every opportunity of education.

When she was twenty-seven she translated Strauss' "Life of Christ," and she was delighted to receive one hundred dollars for her work.

She had no ambition to do anything save this drab work. She did not realize she had the ability.

When asked to be assistant editor of the "Westminster Review," it was with delight that she accepted.

But here come one entered her life who not only filled her heart with love, but stimulated her mind and taught her ambition. With his advice and encouragement she wrote "Amos Barton." It was an immediate success.

The man who was responsible for her adventure into romance and fiction was the hero of her own romance—George Henry Lewes, a prominent editor and literary critic.

They loved each other deeply and sincerely. Lewes was married, but had not lived with his wife for many years. It was impossible for him to secure a divorce.

It was this obstacle of the law, which they considered unjust, that caused George Eliot and George Henry Lewes to consider the unlawful union in which they lived as sacred as marriage.

In this manner they lived for twenty-four years with such dignity and loyalty to each other that their Sunday afternoon receptions became the most charming in London.

George Henry Lewes was the inspiration of George Eliot's books. If it had not been for the encouragement which he gave her we might never have had the privilege of reading "Middlemarch" and "Daniel Deronda."

In 1878 Mr. Lewes died. It was a great surprise to everyone when George Eliot, a few years later, married a Mr. Cross. When she was married she gave her name as "Mary Ann Evans Lewes."

FURNITURE IN HOME

—By Marian Moore—

AN ivory enamel writing desk chair of Heppelwhite design will be of lasting satisfaction to the feminine owner both from the points of beauty and of service.

The desk has two small drawers and two compartments, as well as a larger drawer which is fitted with lock and key. The key arrangement might save Miss Daughter the embarrassment of having her mose recent correspondence repeated at the table by small brother. Every sister knows that can happen in the best regulated families.

Accessories for the desk include a desk set of ivory, a clock and two ivory bud vases. One of the long ostrich feather pens, in rose, blue or yellow, would be equally good in place of the vases, and would add a bright spot of contrasting color or carry out the color scheme of the room very nicely.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

One of the secrets of good dressing is to consider clothes as members of a family, to remember that coats, hats, dresses, waists, shoes and stockings should be brothers and sister. The tragedy of many bargain is the going home with a variety of odd garments, each one satisfactory in itself, but bearing about the same relation to the others as a second cousin to a first wife's husband.

Moisture is unlikely to form on polished or varnished furniture if a little linseed oil is rubbed over the surface of the wood after it has been polished.

GOOD NIGHT STORIES

BE SURE TO READ THEM TO CHILDREN

The Silly Little Crocodile

THE day was glorious, but Croky Crocodile didn't think so. He sat out in the blazing hot sun with a palmetto leaf tied tightly around his head.

"Well, well," Croaker Green Frog called out. "What's the trouble, Mr. Crocodile? Surely you haven't the gripps and I don't have how you could be cold. What is it, the fever?"

"Fever nothing," snapped Croky Crocodile. "I'm just a plain old case of a horrid toothache I've had it for several days now and I can hardly stand it any longer. I've had it tied up in these leaves for at least two days."

"Then try a mud bath," suggested Croaker Green Frog. I've often heard that mud will work wonders."

"I've tried that, too," growled Croky Crocodile. "I've done everything."

"How many teeth have you—very many?" asked his neighbor. "Why don't you have them pulled out?"

"What" Croky Crocodile cried loudly. "Have my teeth all pulled out! Why, that's just what I'd have to do, because I wouldn't say, for the life of me, which one it is that's aching. The upper set of fifty-four—to be exact—seems to hurt."

"Fifty-four teeth in your upper jaw!" cried Croaker Green Frog, his big eyes almost bulging out of his head. "Honestly, have you that many teeth in your head?"

"Yes, and some more," replied Croky Crocodile. "Why, Croaker Green Frog, I have fifty-two more below. What do you thing of that?"

"Then no wonder you have the toothache," laughed Croaker Green Frog. "If I were you I'd have at least half of them yanked out. I'd never be bothered with that many teeth—not me! I wouldn't run the risk of having them all aching at once. Come along, I'll go with you to the dentist. He'll soon pull them for you."

Croky Crocodile thought for a few minutes and decided to pay a visit to the dentist. Mr. Nile Bird, and the two started out.

Dentist Nile Bird was glad to see them. He had always been quite fond of Croky Crocodile. But how he did laugh when Croky Crocodile told him why he had come to his office.

"I'll gladly pull them all out," he chirped, "but it wouldn't do the least bit of good. For down under every tooth in your head there are slowly growing for future use at least two sets more. As fast as one tooth gives out, another takes its place. I could surely pull what you have, but others would spring right up to fill their place. So it wouldn't do you any good. The main thing t odo is to take off the bandage and forget you have the toothache. Get something to do and you won't have time to lie sick."

"Now, if any one else ever told me that," laughed Croky Crocodile, "I'd eat him alive. But Nile Bird is my very best friend." And with that he jerked off his bandage and hurried back home.

There he found so many things to do to help his mother he soon forgot he ever had the toothache

FORBES' VIEWS ON FINANCE

—By B. C. Forbes—

One part of America does not know what's agitating the minds of other parts.

I don't believe, for example, that Chicago, or San Francisco, or Boston, or Philadelphia has the slightest knowledge of what the burning question in a section of the South today is.

I didn't know until I struck North Carolina.

The burning problem is, fitting enough, a tobacco leader, the tobacco leader of America, in fact, namely James Buchanan Duke, known to the world at large as James B. Duke, but known to the South as "Buck" Duke.

Mr. Duke is very rich. I imagine he is really worth about a hundred million dollars. The South, however, with its customary generosity gives Mr. Duke a fortune of three hundred millions. What's a few hundred millions, more or less, among friends?

I arrived in this part of the world—I'm telegraphing this from North Carolina—too late to be in at the beginning of the struggle, but I've had some difficulty in getting at the bottom of what it's all about.

Apparently, however, North Carolina has, and for many years has had, some tax law that Mr. Duke does not like, for as long as he stays outside the State he escapes this tax law. But Mr. Duke has built himself a palace in Piedmont, North Carolina, and is anxious to come and take up his residence in it.

But by becoming a resident of North Carolina Mr. Duke would render himself liable to this tax.

Evidently, it isn't a terribly crushing tax, for all it yielded last year was $180,000.

Mr. Duke, I happen to know of my own knowledge, worries a great deal about taxes, both about the taxes he has to pay and the taxes he doesn't have to pay when he dies.

The law is proposed which would be pleasing to Mr. Duke and the newspapers say would land him and every citizen of North Carolina which was, they think, his native State.

* * *

This proposed law is creating more stir than prohibition, or the boll weevil, or the season's tourist crop.

The whole land has divided itself into pro-Dukes and anti-Dukes. And aren't they waxing excited.

* * *

Take the Raleigh News and Observer. It is ordinarily a quiet, dignified, high toned newspaper. You will be ready to believe this when you know that it is owned by Josephus Daniels, who was Secretary of the Navy in the last administration.

But, oh, how this staid newspaper is letting itself go over the Duke matter.

In one issue I counted eleven editorials, short or long, on the subject.

Read this as a starter: "If Mr. Buck Duke or any other prospective rich citizen is exempt from taxation, the tax must be paid by others. The Parker amendment should read:

"'A bill to compel the average man to pay all the taxes so the super rich man may be exempt.'

"The question goes to the very foundations of justice and equality.

"There were Tories in North Carolina in 1776 who thought it better to pay the tax on tea than go to war. They saw not the living principle beneath that taxation. But the patriots of that day felt and were ready to die for liberty and equality. They remembered and honored. What do we think of the Tories who were ready to sacrifice a principle to save their skin or to please a king?

"If North Carolina sells its faith in equality before the law in taxation the mess of pottage will be dearly bought. The State has never been the hinge of the knee by special privilege in order that thrift may follow fawning.

"Are we ready to follow in the footsteps of the Tories of the days of the Revolution?"

Now are such controversies regrettable, deplorable?

Not at all.

General vigilance is the price of freedom and democracy. It is well that citizens of every State take a keen, searching interest in local as well as national law making. It is well also for their own sake or at least for the sake of their children that the very rich be not allowed to arrogate to themselves too many privileges.

$160,000,000 IN COPPER MERGER

W. F. Bartholomew of Tucker, Bartholomew & Co., is authority for the statement that a merger of coppers largely Boston-owned is under way, involving about $160,000,000.

He says: "Another copper combination is under way. Kennecott will be the absorber and will make offer for minority stock of Utah Copper on basis of seven shares of Kennecott for four shares of Utah Chino may also go in."

Wall and State streets have had the merger seriously reported and denied. Mr. Bartholomew's word can be accepted as authoritative.

Kennecott has 2,000,000 shares capitalization, no par stock, selling at about $41 a share. Utah has $25,000,000 capitalization.

RED METAL AT FRESH PEAKS IN BOSTON

The regular old-fashioned copper market began yesterday, resumed its upward swing on the Boston Stock Exchange today.

Calumet & Arizona, Copper Range, Isle Royale, Mohawk, Old Dominion, East Butte, Osceola, Shannon, Calumet & Hecla, U. S. Smelting, Arizona Commercial North Butte, New Cornelia, St. Mary's and Wolverine all lifted to new 1923 highs. Gains were from fractions to 5 points.

Ahmeek and Quincy hit their previous year's highs.

Waldorf made a new record top for all time at 43¾, up a point in anticipation of New York listing.

Boston & Maine gained a point. Eastern Steamship was up a point at 11¾, its previous high.

Published rumors that Eastern Steamship Lines had entered into negotiations with Cape Cod Canal interests whereby steamship company would keep the canal in good operating condition in return for which its vessels would have free access to the waterway, are denied by Captain H. L. Colpoth, general manager of the canal. Eastern Steamship is the largest customer of the canal, but pays the regular tolls for passage of its ships through the waterway.

U.S. PAYS DEBTS OF ARMY MEN IN BRITAIN

London, March 1 (By the Associated Press).—When John Bull is being patted on the back for settling wartime debts, here Englishmen are equally desirous of administering thumps on Uncle Sam's shoulders for clearing up odds and ends of American obligations in this country.

The inventions commission, sent to England recently, is holding daily sessions to hear claims which will cost the American government thousands of dollars, while the historic banking firm of Messrs. Cox is overjoyed because it has just received from Washington about $20,000 to pay overdrafts of approximately fifty American officers.

The firm advanced thousands of pounds, and when the institution was absorbed by Lloyd's recently the common exclamation around army men was: "Hang goes my overdraft." For a century the house of Cox has considered men with commissions not only as "corps and gentlemen," but as also being responsible for their debts.

The bank had little hope of reimbursing itself, because most of the officers had been discharged from the American army and their addresses were unknown. Consequently, the firm was surprised and gratified when it received the remittance.

U. S. EXPENSES NEAR TWO AND HALF BILLION

By International News Service.

Washington, March 1.—The cost of running the United States government will be $2,675,700,000 during the fiscal year ending June 30, it was estimated today by Senate leaders, with the third deficiency appropriation bill awaiting consideration. This means $22.20 for every man, woman and child in the nation, but it will be the most economical year of government administration since before the war.

With all the great supply bills already passed for the fiscal year of 1924, which begins July 1, it also was estimated the cost of future government would be reduced. Appropriations to date for the fiscal year 1924 totalled $2,286,513,000, with only one bill—the bonus for civilian employes—pending.

HARVEY SLAMS BALFOUR IN DEBT SPEECH

London, March 1 (By the Associated Press).—Ambassador Harvey's assertion that Great Britain had not been asked to guarantee and never did guarantee the "the payment of a single dollar loaned by the United States for the use of any country other than Great Britain herself," stood out today as one of the noteworthy utterances of his address at the Pilgrims' dinner last evening.

Colonel Harvey quoted from the Balfour note of last August the phrase: "Under the agreement arrived at the United States insisted, in substance if not in form, that though our allies were to spend the money, it was only on our security that they were prepared to lend it."

The ambassador said he did not doubt but that the British government would "with equal formality and no less explicitness remove the misapprehension created by this unfortunate allusion."

He went on to say that with the exception of Russia, which was unable to get American products, "the allies owe the United States more than they owe Great Britain," and asserted that the United States did not intend to ruin the credits of any other country by cancelling its debts.

Recalling the conditions under which the British debt had been incurred, Colonel Harvey said that 90 per cent. of the 60,000,000 persons in the United States who contributed to the great war loans were of British descent. This fact, he said, surely implied that if the Americans had thought they were aiding exclusively, although indirectly, the other allies through the British government, the money could not have been raised.

RED LEADER IN DRIVE AGAINST UNION CHIEFS

(International News Service.)

Chicago, March 1. — William Z. Foster, acquitted on "Big Bill" Haywood as the foremost radical in the country, has launched what he declares a "campaign unique in the history of labor."

It is directed against Samuel Gompers, the "Big Five" railroad brotherhood heads and the other "reactionary leaders, as Foster terms them.

It aims to accomplish among other things:

1.—Consolidation of all the sixteen standard railroad unions into one big union.

2—Formation of a Labor party in the United States.

Foster's campaign is launched on the eve of his going to trial with 22 other alleged "Reds" on the charge of violating the Michigan Syndicalist Law.

"Our unions must be remodeled," Foster said. "Their reactionary leaders must be stripped away." The workers given new hope and a general renovation of the Labor movement brought about."

Veterans' Bureau Arena for Political Football

God help the United States Veterans' Bureau! It is quite evident that President Harding is not disposed to do so.

A few days ago this newspaper declared that political pets of the President have made of what was intended to be a life-saving station for disabled soldiers and their dependents an arena for political football.

The manner in which the bureau office in the First, or New England, district has been manhandled was instanced. The Washington correspondent of the Boston Herald has come forward with testimony in support of that charge in a special dispatch.

He says that, "despite the efficiency of Colonel John F. J. Herbert," one of the first duties of the new national director will be to select his successor as manager of the Boston office, as "Colonel Herbert is not considered qualified to continue because he is a Democrat and ran for Lieutenant-Governor in 1919."

That is Harding's idea of service for the disabled. Herbert is a Democrat. Well, he was a soldier, too. He was on the firing line in command of a battery that rendered grand service. None of the American batteries had a better record and few as good.

Herbert was brave and efficient in war. He was honest, courageous and efficient as the American Legion representative in the office of the bureau. He accomplished splendid results as head of the employment office seeking jobs for ex-soldiers. When the local office was rudderless and its crew muddled he was put in temporary command, because he was the man best qualified for the emergency.

He is not seeking the place. Probably he does not want it. But he is a good soldier, he is available, he is the best equipped man in New England for it and his interest in his disabled buddies is strong and sincere.

However, he is a Democrat, and in the eyes of the great psychologist, that condemns him.

What a travesty has this agency for the disabled heroes become since the days of Colonel R. G. Cholmoley-Jones, the man who worked himself to death in their behalf. Incidentally, he was a Republican, and appointed by a Democratic President, but politics had no place in his scheme of things.

Therefore, Harding had no more use for him in Washington than he has for Herbert in Boston.

Counterfeit Coal

[illegible] to Blame for Blackened Rock We Get and Should Be Jailed

[illegible]ob Bitzer is a special investigator for Attorney-General Benton. The things that he is especially investigating are things that relate to our coal situation. He has already reached a very definite and positive conclusion concerning the quality of the coal which we have been receiving. Scarce as that coal is, as little of it as we get at any price, Mr. Bitzer says that a large part of what we do get

Would not burn in hell itself.

We quite agree with Mr. Bitzer. It is not coal at all. It is merely blackened by coal dust. It is nothing but stone and slag. For this particular outrage we do not believe that either the coal dealers or the railroads are responsible, although we do believe, in fact we know, that the railroads are largely responsible for the scarcity of coal.

It is the mine owners who are guilty of shipping to us this miserable counterfeit for coal. They ought to be in jail, and a just government, a real government, would put them there. Men are in jail today for outrages one thousand times less than this. It is like a man who unlooses disease germs on a community. To deprive people of coal in the great cities of the North in the Winter is exactly like spreading the germs of pneumonia among them.

Rights of Stockholders

Improbable That Legislature Will Pass Vicious Bill Denying Stockholders Knowledge of Their Fellows

"Hail, hail the gang's all here" and is once more behind the bill which would allow a corporation to prevent its stockholders from knowing who their fellow stockholders are. Under the present law, which has been on our statute books for a great many years, any stockholder may, as a matter of absolute right and without qualification, demand a list of his fellow stockholders.

This is a very important right at times, not only to the stockholders, but to the public. It is also very important for highly organized and predatory minority interests, who have obtained control of a corporation and propose to exploit it and exploit the public also, to be able to refuse an honest stockholder the knowledge of his fellow stockholders, in order that he may appeal to them to vote against a set of scallawags who have obtained control and are abusing it without their knowledge.

The bill is sugar-coated with seeming innocence. It provides apparently that anybody who has a responsible purpose for asking for a stockholders' list may have it. But who is going to decide what is a reasonable demand for a stockholders' list? They are the very men against whom the stockholders' lists are to be used who will decide whether the demand is reasonable under such circumstances. Will they recognize the demand as reasonable?

The "gang" say in favor of the bill that it is to prevent the use of these lists by those who want to get "suckers" for crooked investments. Well, you cannot keep "suckers" in touch with their money by hiding them under a bushel basket in any such way. Moreover, all legitimate investment houses notify people of opportunities for legitimate and honest investments by the use of these stockholders' lists. The blue sky laws are designed to protect "suckers" so far as "suckers" can be protected from themselves by law.

Under this bill a man who wants to know for a perfectly legitimate reason, who his fellow stockholders are, would have to go to Court to get the list, if those in control of the company did not want to give it to him. It would be a long and expensive litigation and thus be made a substantial denial of the right which every stockholder ought to have to discuss the Company affairs with his fellow stockholders.

This vicious bill has been defeated over and over again and we do not believe that the present Legislature has so degenerated that it will do what all its predecessors, even its worst predecessors, refused to do.

PROBABLY you are, without knowing it, one of the thirty-six.

There is a tale in the Talmud, whose lore is cherished by orthodox Jews almost as much as the Bible, and which you will be interested to read.

Doubtless it was suggested by the familiar story of Sodom and Gomorrah, those "grievously sinful" cities which Abraham, with pious bargaining with the Lord, tried to save from destruction.

You remember—If there are fifty, forty-five, forty, thirty, twenty, ten righteous within the city, "wilt Thou not forgive the place for the righteous that are therein?"

And so, according to the Talmudical tale, there are thirty-six righteous in every community. They are the salvation of the place.

Without them it would share the fate of Sodom and Gomorrah!

These saintly men are not known to one another. Nor does any one of them know that he is one of the thirty-six.

But their "light so shines" that the commonalty know and revere them correspondingly. Are you one of thirty-six? The numbers have increased tremendously. The salt of the earth—mineral and human—is abundant. Despite hellish war and its terrible aftermath, one must say that human nature tends towards health and improvement.

The "thirty-six" everywhere have multiplied incalculably since the "good, old days"—than which our day is incalculably better.

$585 in Burned Bills Redeemed

ASTORIA, Ore., March 1.—Ashes found in the corner of his safe—all that remained of a roll of currency aggregating $600 following the recent conflagration here—brought Dr. E. Nelson Neulen $585 from the government. He was ready to throw them away when a safe expert advised him to send the ashes to the Treasury Department. Federal experts identified all but three $5 bills, and asked if Dr. Neulen would be willing to settle on a basis of $585. He very gladly settled.

Leads to Pneumonia

Editor Boston American:

During a conversation I overheard a few days ago on the coal scarcity one man remarked that no man committed a greater crime and still be within the jurisdiction of the law than the present coal barons. I certainly do agree with him because statistics at present show that the number of deaths from pneumonia is greater by fifty per cent. during the period of fuel scarcity. When the temperature of the body falls below the normal then the resistance to disease is proportionally weakened, thereby endangering the life and health of the individual. Are not these facts weighty enough to demand even an earnest investigation?

Uncle Sam's Duty at Home

Editor Boston American:

"Uncle Sam's duties reach as far from home as his interests." The above line appeared on the editorial page of February 23.

This may or may not be technically true, but it is misleading. My neighbor may owe me money, but the fact of this interest in him does not necessarily warrant my interference in his affairs, either business or social. I have no duty towards him by virtue of his indebtedness, except to act by him in such a manner as will best enable him to pay me and that he does not go to the extent of investing more money with him, and is, in fact, a duty to myself rather than to him.

Uncle Sam is in the same position, and just now most of us think of such a proposition as that quoted in connection with the conditions in Europe.

Uncle Sam must be very careful to avoid speculative experiments away from home. As the head of a family, actually suffering from his former escapades, his duty is to his own people.

Editor Boston American:

Did Mr. Phelan break the commandments? I should say he did. The place for Mr. Phelan is in Canada. Fill his place with some one who is not a Canadian.

Vandalism in Egypt

Editor Boston American:

Of course, the breaking into Tut-Ankh-Amen's tomb in Egypt by the English is not vandalism for the most mean kind of robbery, the robbing of the dead. It seems it all depends on who commits the crime. England can do no wrong. What an example for the rest of the world! The clerics and churches are dumb, yet they would condemn some poor wretch for doing a like deed.

Sick Child Needs Clothes

Editor Helping Hand:

I am a little girl twelve years old. My father has been out of work through sickness, and I just got up out of a sick bed. I had irritation of the kidney. I haven't anything to wear, and I am afraid I will catch cold going to school, as I have only one dress. I wear size 14 or 15, as I am old for my age. I would also like clothes for my brothers, who are nine, seven and four, and my sister who is ten.

Baby Carriage Offered

Editor Helping Hand:

I have a baby carriage that M. B. R. can have. If supplied, let me have the address of someone that needs one. MRS. C. C.

ED. NOTE—Thank you. Baby carriages are always needed.

Iron Bed to Exchange

Editor Helping Hand:

If any of your readers have any old sheeting, blankets or night gowns, I would like to have same, as I have an old lady in my care whose bed has to be changed every hour, so all the things I had on hand are worn out. Will give in exchange a nice white iron bed or a very good kitchen table.

Shorthand Book

Editor Helping Hand:

I noted a request for a Gregg shorthand book in a recent issue. I haven't Gregg's, but have a Graham's book of shorthand that I would be glad to give away if it will be of use to anyone.

MRS. H. P. S.

ED. NOTE—Mrs. L. P., who asked for it, has been supplied.

Needs Crutches

Editor Helping Hand:

I would like if you would ask your readers if anyone has a pair of crutches, 56 inches long, that they would like to give, also anything in the line of dresses. I am a cripple with one leg and my husband has been out of work since December. If any of your readers have a pair of trousers for a tall man, I would be very thankful.

Play Leap Frog to Keep Youth

BERKLEY, Cal., March 1.—A group of married women of this city have discovered what they believe is the secret of youth.

Their secret has been known for many years, but is not generally practiced. It is the old-fashioned games and sports, which are being played instead of bridge.

Their secret has been known for many years, but is not generally practiced. It is the old-fashioned games and sports, which are being played instead of bridge.

Three times a week the thirty women who have formed the first class gather at the Y. M. C. A., forget their years and household cares and are putting the roses into their cheeks and grace to their bodies just by the simple games the "kids" play, including leap frog, swimming and a regular "gym" course.

ANOTHER DUNCE CAP FOR YESTERDAY'S WISEACRES

By Herbert Kaufman

TUTANKHAMEN was a recent happening. He was Egypt, and the moon God's harem under Ur, are historical parvenus, too modern for nature to mention in her paleolithic diaries.

Time remembers folk in Patagonia a million years ago. One of their skulls has just popped into the news.

Until a settler picked it up on his property and showed it to explorers, science was sure that a walking ape in Java planted our family tree.

Now we learn that 500,000 years before that primate's existence a race of long-headed, slant-browed humans dwelt on the southern tip of South America, whose rocks and ruins have hardly started to babble of vanished peoples and unsuspected civilizations.

If ethynologists read this bit of bone aright, more cocksure books must be revised. And another lot of dunce caps stuck on yesterday's wiseacres.

Every scholar is more or less of a crow eater. All knowledge is comparative.

A Man Who Saw the Mountains Made

Patagonia's aboriginal emerges from tertiary sandstone. The earth began to cool off and take present form in the tertiary age.

Then Alaska and Siberia were one piece; the East Indies hadn't seceded from Africa; one could walk from Asia to Australia and there was a vast equatorial ocean called Tethys.

Researchists hadn't the least suspicion until last week that any of our people were on hand to watch the making of mountains and the splitting of continents.

It suddenly appeared probable that the links missing from evolution's chain will be found in this part of the globe.

Million-Mile Spectacles

One of the Beta stars has suddenly burst into flames. The empyrean for tens of thousands of miles around is a mass of inflammable gas.

And yet the conflagration is hidden from any but supremely powerful telescopes.

Astronomers tell us that our planet would burn to a crisp if the same thing happened to the sun.

Most of us wonder why time and money are wasted watching the infinite processes in the heavens. It may interest you to know that the sky detectives on Mount Lowe and other observatory points gathered from overhead advance information on helium, hafnium and radio motive forces which provide materials for indefinite miracles.

The attic of the universe is an unrummaged storehouse. The gentleman from Patagonia knew almost as much about it as we do.

After a bit we'll have million-mile spectacles and then we shall achieve things.

Blind Men Begin to Use Spare Parts

French surgeons are teaching the blind to see. Two patients, sightless from birth, are reported able to distinguish objects in a powerful light.

The method is thoroughly explicable. A different set of nerve centres is called into play and trained to substitute for the short circulated little wires, over which vision is normally flashed.

Gland transplantation, recently jeered as a fantastic dream, has become stable practice in responsible medical circles.

Before long human parts will be replaced as casually as damaged and outworn machines are repaired.

It isn't at all certain that we shan't successfully borrow sight and rejuvenation from the jungle and the barnyard.

We used to put men in padded cells for barely mentioning the possibility of performances that lately put them on international pedestals.

Ettinger Talks Dollars and Sense

A New York lad is awarded $50,000 for a lost eye. The carelessness that robs youth of any valuable faculty should be adequately penalized.

In this century and country of unlimited opportunity no man's expectations should be cheaply valued.

That maimed boy's earning power is easily diminished a thousand dollars annually.

Dr. Ettinger, a celebrated educator, would corroborate the above estimate. He finds after extensive study that pupils who remain in school until eighteen average nine hundred dollars a year more income at twenty-five than those who stop at fourteen. Imagine how much less a blind boy can expect to earn.

Incidentally, managers of the Carnegie Foundation in favor of shortening study courses may put his figures in their pipes and smoke them.

Standard Oil Fills Another Lamp

Carnegie experts continue uncertain how best to spend the steel master's millions.

Philadelphia's last horror suggests a possible use for part of the money. Surely some general way can be found to detect such creatures as Wylie Morgan before their unspeakable tendencies pass incipiency.

Specialists instantly perceive the stigamata of madness. Features, manner and cranial development all betray the utter degenerate.

Nature has branded her unfit and bids us read the marks.

Rockefeller has pledged $1,250,000 to the Academy of Medicine, so that special workers in zoology, psychiatry and anthropology may have unhampered chance for advanced study.

Standard Oil is filling a precious lamp. If only it could throw warning light on such dark souls as Morgan's.
